

The old battle frigate "Constitution" lying at the wharf in the Boston Navy Yard and surrounded by some of Uncle Sam's modern war vessels. Picture gives an idea of the marvelous progress that has been made in the construction of fighting craft since the days of the "Constitution." —Wide World

Artificial pearls made on Cape Cod. The scales of herring are placed in a bottle and secret solutions of chemicals poured over them. These chemicals dissolve the scale and make them into a solution. The solution is then placed into a pan and each pearl is dipped into the solution and set into a rack to dry. The base of the pearl is made of smoked glass preparation and is indestructible. The pearls that are dipped and handled by hand sell on the market for about $200 a string and are so close to the genuine pearl that only an expert can distinguish the difference. —Wide World
