

Charities Work Doubled in 1924, Thousands Aided

Meeting to Be Held Tuesday Noon at Brandeis Restaurants; Typical Case Cited.

The Associated Charities in 1924 assisted twice as many families as in 1923, the annual report shows. Families to the number of 1,106, new to the organization, were taken care of, 8,047 children under 16 were given assistance according to their varied needs; 301 widows were helped or put in the way of helping themselves; 209 transients were given assistance.

"The officers and workers and all concerned feel that the public has come to understand and co-operate with the Associated Charities better than ever before and during the year the 12 regular visitors from the office had the assistance of a large number of volunteer workers," said Mrs. A. W. Shotwell.

A typical instance mentioned is that of a woman who reported a week ago to thank the Associated Charities which, she said, had put her and her family of nine on their feet at a time when hope was nearly gone. Moral support and encouragement were given as well as material aid and the family has now rehabilitated itself. "We thank you for our very lives," said the woman.

"This is the sort of work the Charities does," said Mrs. Shotwell, "not merely insuring relief but placing of families in positions to be self-sustaining by encouragement and well-directed aid."

Persons having situations to fill are asked to call the Charities. There is also need for second-hand clothing which will be called for if reported to Jackson 2257.

There will be a meeting Tuesday noon in the Brandeis restaurants.

DOLL HOSPITAL IN NEW LOCATION

For many years those having doll families have looked to Dr. Penner's Doll hospital for the care of almost every ill to which dolls are subject. Such minor ailments as decapitation, fracture of the skull, broken limbs, hemorrhage of the peritoneum, high sandust pressure, falling hair, sleeping sickness or shuteyes, as it is sometimes called, are treated by the resident physician.

Mothers are advised that from today on, the new hospital will be located in the top department on the third floor at Orchard-Wilhelm.

Dr. Penner, who has been famous for his prophylactic health talks, will be glad to advise parents on the preservation of dolly's health. The famous aphorism "China Heads and Cement Sidewalks Don't Go Well Together" is one of Dr. Penner's themes and it will thought of in all doll circles.

Uithovens to Erie.

M. Uithoven, formerly assistant merchandise manager of Burgess-Nash, has returned from Erie, Pa., where he obtained a position as merchandise manager for a store. He and his family will leave this week for Erie, after spending several days in Chicago enroute.

Scotch Boy Climbs Long Hill As Lawyer, Fire Chief, Police Head, Banker, and King Ak-Sar-Ben XXX In Omaha And Now John L. Kennedy Plans to Try Playing Awhile

By J. T. ARMSTRONG. The pink-cheeked little schoolboy listened intently, his lips slightly parted and his eyes large and bright. The dour old Scotch schoolmaster was telling his class about Abraham Lincoln and the great United States across the Atlantic to the westward. "There is no slavery in the United States. All have equal opportunities, regardless of their birth," related the schoolmaster. He told of the civil war which was fought to keep the principle of liberty alive, and of the humble birth of Lincoln.

And to the pink-cheeked school boy of Uplawmoor public school in faraway Renfrewshire, Scotland, this talk was revelation. In him was born a staunch determination to live in the United States, where obscure origin prevented no one from rising to heights.

Snow was falling slowly in the silent, almost deserted street. Squat, unpainted frame dwellings, boasting the customary false fronts, loomed up in grotesque shapes in the half dusk of early dawn.

A light shone here and there, indicating activity among early risers, but causing the unlighted sections to appear even more gloomy and desolate.

The young man, bearing a worn traveling bag, stopped in the center of the street and shivered. It was partly the cold and partly the dreariness of the scene that led him to drop his grip and pull his coat closer about his shoulders. Then, seizing his bag and throwing back his shoulders, he walked westward, kicking up dirt from the unpaved thoroughfare as he progressed.

These were two big moments in the life of John Lauderdale Kennedy, Omaha's leading citizen.

First, the birth of determination to live and prosper in the United States; second, his arrival in Omaha 43 years ago—his advent to the city for which he has labored so unselfishly, and which has given him so much.

Today, Mr. Kennedy, gray of hair and lined of countenance, is making plans to retire from some of the score of activities in which he has been a leader for so many years.

Emigrated at 19. Born in Ayrshire, Scotland, on October 27, 1854, Mr. Kennedy realized his first great ambition, engendered by the schoolmaster of Uplawmoor public school, when, at the age of 19, he crossed the Atlantic to this country.

there was no turning back for me and I was young and soon began to enjoy it here.

In 1882 the law firm of Kennedy & Martin was established. In 1888 Myron L. Learned succeeded Mr. Martin, and the partnership of Kennedy & Learned continued for 19 years.

Served as Fire Chief. Not only did Mr. Kennedy take an important part in civic development of the city; he also entered politics.

In 1882 he was graduated from the law department of the Iowa university and in December of that year he came to Omaha and engaged in the practice of law.

Not only did Mr. Kennedy take an important part in civic development of the city; he also entered politics. Just how far he will go into retirement is a question creating considerable discussion.

Yet he is 70, and the long road which he has traveled has been mostly upgrade, as are most of those which lead to a fulfillment of ambitious dreams.

COLLEGE YOUTH'S MEMORY RETURNS. Lincoln, Jan. 10.—The mind of Harvey Thiele, University of Nebraska freshman, whose home is in Hanover, Kan., will be a blank so far as the events between last Friday and this morning are concerned.

Last Friday, Thiele slipped on a cake of soap after taking a shower bath. According to his physician, he suffered a slight concussion of the brain. Today, however, he regained his memory except of the events which transpired since he slipped on the cake of soap a week ago.

Space permits us to mention only a very few of the exceptional bargains.

administrator for Nebraska in 1917 to 1918. Mr. Kennedy has been president of the United States National bank of Omaha since January, 1920; chairman of the board of directors, United States Trust company; director and attorney for J. L. Brandeis and Sons and the Brandeis Investment company; president of the Omaha Clearing House association; and president of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

This resume of his activities is by no means exhaustive. He is one of the most sought after post dinner speakers in the city. No meeting pertaining to civic enterprise seems complete without him. He has welcomed almost as many notables to the city as has Mayor Dahlman.

Yet Mr. Kennedy has never sought the limelight. He is a member of the Omaha club, Happy Hollow club and the Omaha country club. Yet he prefers to spend his evenings at home, and appears to enjoy quiet luncheons with a friend or two more invariably a principal speaker. It is not unusual for him to have three speaking engagements during one noon time, and he smilingly declares that he is always beat at the second or third engagement, when he is "well under way."

Perhaps a climax in Mr. Kennedy's career was the honor paid him by Ak-Sar-Ben, Omaha, and Nebraska's greatest civic organization, which crowned him king of the Realm of Quivera at a brilliant ball closing the fall Ak-Sar-Ben festival of 1924. He is the 30th king of the realm; he has been counsel for Ak-Sar-Ben for the same number of years.

Mr. Kennedy's home on West Dodge road, in Fairacres, "Binnl Brae," was one of the most beautiful homes to be built in that section. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy were married in 1905. Mrs. Kennedy was formerly Miss Marguerite Pritchett, daughter of the late George Pritchett. Their children are John Hancock, 15; Edward L., 16, and Katherine Virginia, 9. The two sons are students at Pottstown, Pa.

It is from the presidency of the United States National bank that Mr. Kennedy contemplates retiring this week.

He has never played, and now he wants to try playing; his close friends say. Just how far he will go into retirement is a question creating considerable discussion. Some say he will be unable to rest and play as long as he remains in Omaha, so great are the demands on his time and energy. There is no doubt but that he is engaging as actively in as many things today as ever before.

Everything Done by Electricity in Model Home

Many Daily Visitors to Electric House Constructed by League.

Since the Omaha Electrical league announced the opening of the model home, built by the Benson & Garrett company at 661 North Fifty-sixth street in conjunction with the league, hundreds of men and women have visited the house which is open every day from 2:30 to 5:30 and from 6:30 to 9:30, except Sundays then it is open from 2 to 6.

This home is an exact reproduction of the model electric home that was awarded as first national prize in the Better Home Lighting essay contest recently conducted in the United States.

Each room in the home has lighting to conform with the general principles of a perfect home and good lighting, or selected lighting for that particular room.

The living room of this home is an example of perfectly diffused light, and proper color effects by the correct placing of fixtures. There are two ceiling fixtures of four lamps each, and two single wall brackets on two walls compose the permanent lighting. A library lamp, a reading lamp and a floor lamp make up the portable lighting. All of the lamps are shaded to harmonize with the general color effects and give proper light.

The electrical appliances in the dining room are a percolator, toaster, waffle iron and chafing dish. Over the dining room table is a low-hung ceiling fixture, which gives sufficient light for this room. A triplex tap has been furnished for this room so that three electrical appliances may be in use from one cord. This tap can be placed anywhere or attached to the under side of the dining table. Attached to the dining table is a maid or butler-buzzer.

The various electrical appliances in the kitchen harmonize with its snowy-whiteness. The electric range, electric refrigerator, electric dishwasher, electric ventilating system and an electric mixer make this kitchen complete. The lighting for the kitchen consists of a center ceiling fixture and wall brackets over the sink and range.

In the bedrooms the lighting effects have been installed so as to bring out individuality. Convenient wall brackets to furnish sufficient light for dressing tables and mirrors are in these rooms. Electric curlers, vibrators, boudoir lamps, electric heating pads, violet-ray generators, and a sewing machine are some of the equipment in the various bedrooms.

The bathroom has a built-in electric heater. The brackets on each side of the mirror in the bathroom give an even flood of light. A center ceiling fixture supplies the balance of light. An electric immersion heater is in the bathroom also.

The laundry is complete, electrically. An electric household iron, an electric washer and an electric automatic ironer are the equipment for this laundry in the basement.

In order that the home may be kept at an even temperature at all times, an automatic electric control has been installed on the furnace. All wiring in the home is enclosed in lead pipes, which run directly to the switch boxes.

ATLAS CLUB HEADS ASSUME OFFICES. The Omaha Atlas club at its annual banquet at the Elks club installed the following officers for 1925: President, Dr. Hugh W. Thomas; secretary, Dr. Harvey McNichols; treasurer, Dr. Ethel T. Malby.

Directors for the year are: Dr. J. A. Markwell, chairman; Dr. Frank F. Burhorn, Dr. William J. Gemar, Dr. Morris Mortensen, Dr. Vernon R. Thomas.

Dr. R. W. Allen had charge of the meeting.
