Buster Keaton Starts on "Honeymoon Alone," in "The Navigator"

Buster Keaton is out in the open gator." which is showing this week at the Sun theater. The story concerns Rollo Treadway, a rich, spoiled youth who decides to get married. Buster, as Rollo, calls on Betsy, the lady of his dreams, but believing him a weakling, she refuses him.

Buster then decides to go on the honeymoon trip alone, having already purchased the steamship tickets. He arrives on the liner, finds the stateroom and goes to sleep. The trouble is he's on the wrong ship- it is a foreign government. By a strange coincidence, Betsy boards the ship just as the ropes are cut by secret agents of a revolting party, who want to prevent the exportation of ammu

She and Buster are the only occupants of the ship. What follows is said to be a series of side-splitting adventures, with Buster trying to run the big liner and Betsy learning that she has misjudged the man who
