Southwest Corner of Basement Safest Refuge From Tornado, Robins' Answer to Call

Omaha's tornado that took a toll of more than 100 lives occurred just 12 years ago. On March 23, 1913, a black cloud appeared at the southwestern limit of the city and swept five miles diagonally across Omaha leaving death and destruction in its wake.

"It is almost an impossibility to predict a tornado, said M. V. Robins of the local weather bureau. 'Tornadoes may occur in the midwest just as earthquakes may be prevalent in certain parts of the country but they are freaky things.

Falls With Wind. 'Tornadoes do not necessarily follow river valleys. 'The southwest corner of a basement in a home is perhaps the safest place of refuge.

Only Superstition. 'It is only a superstition that a tornado might occur on the same date as one previous,' he said. On March 23, 1913, the morning was of low pressure condition in the area over eastern Colorado.

Dawes Assailed by Senator Reed

Choice of Warren for Attorney General Also Rapped by Missouri Solon.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., March 21.—Vice President Charles G. Dawes was bitterly assailed by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri here this afternoon because of his proposal to reform the senate rules.

Senator Reed called Dawes an agitator, a reformer and charged Dawes "knew little about rules which ordinarily obtain among persons of good breeding."

Charles B. Warren of Michigan, President Coolidge's choice for attorney general, and rejected by the senate, also came in for a stinging lash at the tongue of Reed.

World War Hero Takes Own Life by Shot, Fire

Pawnee City Veteran, Health Shattered in Service, Uses Gasoline and Shotgun to End Suffering.

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee, Pawnee City, Neb., March 21.—Tragic echo of the world war was heard here today when one of its heroes answered the question, "What Price Glory?"

Driven to the brink that breaks abruptly off into the pit of despair, Herman Brauer, 31, once proud warrior of the nation's distinguished service ribbons for gallantry in action, ended his life by shooting and burning himself to death.

Wrapped in Flames. About 9:30 Saturday morning Brauer's sister, Minnie, saw her brother leave the house carrying his shotgun. A query brought the reply that he was going to the barn to clean it.

San Francisco, March 22.—Dorothy Ellingson, 16, who shot and killed her mother, Mrs. Anna Ellingson, on January 15, will go on trial tomorrow before Superior Judge Harold Louderback on a charge of murder. Mrs. Ellingson was shot down in a bedroom of her home after she had denied her daughter permission to go to a "jazz" party.

Dies at Noon. Unable to leave her, the white-haired mother to the hospital, helped to give aid, as her daughter told over the telephone the tale of tragedy.

Besides Miss Minnie, Brauer is survived by three other sisters, Thelma Brauer, Central City, Minn.; Lillian Bird City, Kan.; and Mrs. Lester McClinck of north of Pawnee City.

Funeral services will be held in the Methodist church at Table Rock Monday morning and the body will be interred in the Table Rock cemetery.

Gripping Romance of Business Back of Announcement of New Air Service

Pact Between Russian Count and Col. Harold Hartney, Who Flew in Omaha, Responsible for Aerial Taxi.

By CHARLES B. PALMER, Universal Service Staff Correspondent. New York, March 22.—Back of the recent announcement of Col. Harold Hartney that he has formed the Boston-Twin Cities air line, lies the story of a gripping business romance, the details of which Universal Service learned today.

Through the romance stalk a number of figures, one of them being a long haired Russian count, Igor Sikorsky. His hair is long from motives of economy. Why spend money with barbers, he asks, when it is needed to perfect an airplane which may revolutionize the world's transportation system?

It is Sikorsky's plane, the only American metal multi-motored transport plane, which will be used by Hartney's General Airways System, Inc.

The second prominent figure, of course, is Hartney himself. The bird is Homer Berry who has tested Sikorsky's plane and will be the first pilot.

Back of these are scores of supers—Russian cigarette makers, dancers, restaurant waiters—all of whom have contributed their bit toward the completion of the plane. Two years ago Hartney conceived the idea of an over night air line connecting Boston, New York, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul. Through many a night he figured its possibilities as a carrier of passengers, express, private message bags, etc. Then he began a search for a plane.

About that time a Russian with long hair appeared at Roosevelt Field, L. I., and wished to rent a shack where he could do some work. He explained he was an airplane designer.

He got the shack and in a few days four other Russians appeared and took up living quarters. These Russians, former molles from the czar's court, now poverty stricken, began to construct the plane. They had to work in the late afternoons when their time was not required on their regular jobs, and on their days off. The plane was literally built in off hours, and with money donated by other working Russians here.

When the craft made a successful flight, Colonel Hartney appeared on the scene. It was just the plane he was looking for. So Hartney and Sikorsky struck a bargain. They struck it on faith and hope and the love of their friends, for neither man has a penny. One perfected a commercial plane. The other planned a national airway system. On April 1 they plan to begin a weekly service. On August 1 they contemplate a daily service.

The count's hair is still long while Hartney and his chosen pilot, Homer Berry, live in a small plan without bath. Though none of the trio have money, the evidently have found that money is looking for an opportunity. Two groups of financiers wanted to finance the project. Hartney talked Turkey with both and closed the deal when he felt the terms were "just right."

These men dreamed. They worked. And now they are about to achieve. Colonel Hartney, who is widely known in Omaha, was injured while flying in the Pulitzer air race here in 1921. He suffered a broken hip when his plane crashed near Honey Creek, Ia.

He visited Omaha last December to confer with Carl Egge, superintendent of the air mail, and at that time announced his plan for the inauguration of an aerial taxi line on which Omaha ultimately will be included.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. A judgment passed in haste or fright you'll find is very seldom right. —Johnny Chuck.

Johnny and Polly Chuck Rejoice. It is bad enough to want something and not to be able to get it; it is worse to have that something and then lose it. This had happened to Johnny and Polly Chuck. A great stone had fallen and blocked the doorway to their new home under the old stone wall in the upper corner of the Old Orchard. All day they had wan-

"Look where?" grumbled Johnny rather crossly.

Johnny and Polly Chuck were scrambling for home as fast as their legs could take them. And such rejoicing as there was when they found their doorway open! They ran in and out a dozen times, almost squealing with delight.

"What did I tell you about Farmer Brown's boy?" cried Johnny Chuck at last. Polly pretended not to hear. "This is going to be the best, the very best home ever," said she.

"Look!" exclaimed Polly Chuck stopping so abruptly that Johnny, who was right at her heels, almost bumped into her. "Look where?" grumbled Johnny rather crossly.

"Over by our new house," whispered Polly, who was sitting up behind an apple tree and peeping around it. "It is Farmer Brown's boy, and he is doing something there. Johnny

There are 42 men, women and children in the group which arrived here at 15 at Crookston. The party now here appealed to a local church for aid and this together with about $100 which the leaders had, enabled them to rent two houses here. According to the story told by the refugees, they attended a meeting at Brent called by the alleged agent who said the railroad wished to send settlers to Grand Forks, N. D., and Crookston. The seven families sold all their belongings, turned the money over to the agent, who purchased tickets and sent them to Crookston.

When they arrived at Crookston several days ago they could find no one who had ever heard of the agent there were there any jobs awaiting them. The families here are those of Fred Vogler, Philip Hohenstein, Henry Keitz and Philip Scheller. They plan to return to Brent as soon as they can earn enough money for the trip.
