"Knuckle down." The first robin has long since been succeeded as the harbinger of spring by the first marble game. Here we find Pietro, Tom, Patsy, Fred, George, Pete, Louis, Angelo, Carl, Sam, two Franks and two Tonys busily engaged in a convenient spot at Twentieth and Poppleton streets.

Over the top. In real life these enthusiastic warriors are: Ardo Cantoni, Philip Stein, Waldo Little, Alfred Sorenson, Russell Wood, Carl Schram, George Hansen, Russell Ryan, Billie Cantoni, Willie Sich, Howard King.

The battle is on. Attacking the fort are Bernard Theodore, Russell Wood, Sammy Howell, Bobby Drier, Gene Stevens. Defending are: Wilfred Sorenson, Frank Adams, Sam Theodore, Russell Ryan, George Hansen.

He's safe! Jack Wright is the young man who made the successful slide into home plate in spite of the fact that asphalt pavement is a little hard on the clothes. The other youngsters in the group are: left to right: Carl Schram, Billie Cantoni, Mildred Cantoni, Russell Wood, Alfred Sorenson and Sylvia Parkin.
