

Creighton Gym Transformed for Junior-Senior Prom

The Creighton university Prom committee, in planning the decorations for the annual Junior-Senior social event, found that the work of designing an appropriate setting for the 1925 party required the assistance of an artificer skilled in arranging elaborate decorative schemes, so Gus Renz, famous for his Ak-Sar-Ben art construction, was called into consultation. With his help, it is planned to begin work a week in advance of the Prom and develop the main floor of the gymnasium into a beautiful summer garden, the scene for the ceremonies which will be staged Friday evening, April 24.

Interest and speculation over the possible choice for Prom Queen is at its traditional height. Her identity will be kept secret until the curtains part before the royal party at 10:30 o'clock a week from Friday night. An impressive coronation is being planned. A grand march will follow this part of the evening's program.

Art Randall and his popular orchestra will play for the occasion. Surprise entertainment numbers, a special "midnight mystery," and new musical features by Randall's royal orchestra will contribute to the fun.

Chairman Edward Christie of the Prom committee will call a number of special meetings this week. Assisting him in the work of managing the Prom this year are the following men, each one president of his class: Oscar Doer, senior; Tom O'Brien, junior; medicine; Tom Coleman, junior; arts; Thomas Russell, junior; law; Earl Dieter, senior; arts; Glenn Staley, junior; dentistry; William Pratt, senior; pharmacy; James Lovely, senior; dentistry; and "Chaperones for the Prom" will be Dr. and Mrs. Herman Von W.

Home-Notes

In laying out the floor plan of the upstairs this alcove in the wall of one of the bedrooms was inevitable. Several plans for utilizing this space were considered, but it was finally decided to build in an alcove bed.

Home-Notes

In the peasant homes of Europe alcove beds are very common, but we would not consider them sufficiently ventilated for general use. However, this one does make a very nice day bed. It is equipped with comfortable springs and mattresses and is a restful and quiet spot to take a daytime nap. The curtains can be drawn against the possibility of too much light.

Mrs. Hart Writes of Great Naval Spectacle April 5

Mrs. J. G. Hart, who, with Mr. Hart, is passing the winter in California, writes to friends under date of April 5 telling of the fleet in San Francisco bay that day:

"It was the greatest naval spectacle in United States peace time history. As the combined fleets steamed through the Golden Gate, 145 warships, 43,000 officers and men, it gave one a thrill.

"To ships men pay homage such as they give to no other material things. The fleet, representing a great defensive force, holds unique place in popular affections. This fleet is the greatest ever to visit San Francisco bay. It recognizes Pacific waters as the place for the nation's floating armament, this bay being designed by nature as a resting place for ships."
