Visitors Were Members of Scientific Tour to Mexico

Interesting guests in the city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Armstrong are Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wright of San Jose, Cal. Mrs. Wright is sister of Mrs. Armstrong.

As an astronomer at Lick observatory, University of California, Mr. Wright headed the expedition which went into Mexico last September to view the eclipse of the sun. Mrs. Wright accompanied him. They went to Ensenada in Lower California.

"Our preparations required a month," said Mr. Wright. We went down on August 12 and remained for a month and a half. Unfortunately the weather was cloudy when September 5 arrived.

We were made aware of the Mexicans' disposition to do everything for us. They were delightfully hospitable. The government gave us automobile trucks for transportation purposes. They furnished gasoline and drivers as well and in every way were ideal hosts. The people of Lower California are very superior. Property is absolutely safe there, even when unguarded.

There will be an eclipse of the sun next January, visible in the east and in Nebraska, Mr. Wright thinks. Another will be visible in Sumatra at a later time.

Mrs. and Mr. Wright leave Sunday to return to Mt. Hamilton. Mrs. John Lionberger was a luncheon hostess Friday for Mrs. Wright.

Your Problems

By Martha Allen

A Change of Heart.
Dear Miss Allen: I went about with a young man for a year and a half, and we were to be married this year. He showed his love for me in every way. Everything seemed to go along beautifully until a few months ago when without any reason he left me, but still he wants to keep up the friendship. This was a sudden shock to me, but it did not kill my love for him. It only made it stronger. What would you advise me to do?
HEARTBROKEN.

When you say "he left me," I suppose you mean the young man told you he was not ready to marry you. Perhaps he has some financial difficulties which make it impossible for him to take on new responsibilities now. At all events, since he talks about "keeping up the friendship," there is some assurance that he still cares for you. But some explanation should be given so you will know what the peculiar conditions are all about. Ask him gently to make himself clear to you. Say that if he no longer loves you, you would rather know. But try to have faith and to know that if this love is right for you, it cannot be taken from you, and that if it is not real and durable you are glad to know it now instead of later when it might have power to change your life.

Puzzled Boy.
Dear Martha Allen: Last summer I met a nice girl at a convention that we attended. We were together a great deal of the time. I didn't have any serious intentions beyond the pleasure of each other's company. Evidently she had. We decided to write to each other. Now in her home town she refuses to go with anyone. She is popular and a very good mixer. According to a boy friend I have at that place, she acts as if we were engaged.

What should I do? I have tried discouraging correspondence, but that hasn't worked out, and I do not want to hurt her. I value her friendship highly.

Hoping to find this in print and earnestly wishing an answer, I am,
"LONELY"

You have nothing to fear if you have not misrepresented the truth. I realize it is difficult for a boy to break away from a friendship without some reason. But fact, good judgment and a kindly spirit will effect it for you, so you need not hurt her feelings. You must not deceive her into thinking you care for her seriously because in the end that would be a cruelty to her.
