

SOCIETY AND WOMAN'S PAGE

Musicians Hold Trial of Member Wearing Tuxedo

Not all crimes and misdemeanors reach the courts of law. Certain groups of citizens, therefore, have deemed it right and proper that they should seize justice by the forelock, as it were, and administer her virtuous qualities at their own discretion.

Such a group gathered at the home of Mrs. A. V. Kinsler Tuesday night. They were a crowd of musicians who are wont to congregate informally.

Fred Ellis arrived a la tuxedo, it was agreed this was offense.

Trial followed. Jean Duffled in cap and gown conducted the proceedings. To end suspense, the prisoner was finally acquitted, though trouble may yet ensue, for it now appears that he committed perjury. He was exonerated on his statement that he possesses only two suits. The "other one" being at the cleaner's, he had no choice as to raiment for the evening. But close friends of Mr. Ellis are circulating the report that he has also a fishing suit.

Good will, however, may prevent any untoward development of the case. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis will entertain at a housewarming at their home next Sunday night and if the court can be inveigled into jolly mood, it is more than probable, witnesses say, that the entire matter will be dropped.

Miss Peabody Wed to Mr. Payne in Kansas City

The marriage of Miss Nell Elizabeth Peabody, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hutchinson Peabody of Kansas City, to Harold Carnaby Payne of Omaha, took place at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in Kansas City.

Dr. Harry Clayton Rogers of the Methodist Episcopal church read the service, assisted by the Rev. Edwin A. Schell.

The bride was gowned in white ring satin, embroidered in pearls. Her train, which fell from the shoulders, was of duchesse lace, and was framed in a band of satin embroidered in pearls. Her veil of tulle was held with orange blossoms and chintones, and was caught to the train with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses, Ophelia roses, lilies of the valley and orange blossoms. The maid of honor was Miss Margerite Peabody, sister of the bride.

The bridesmaids were Miss Lucille LaCoff, Miss Mary Williams, Miss Wilma Betts, Miss Eleanor Renfro, Miss Dorothy Payne of Omaha and Miss Elsa Peabody.

Howard Payne was best man for his brother, and the groomsmen were Edmund Speck, Charles Bombbeck, Jr., John Rowland Bessy, Alpha Brown and Raymond Stryker of Omaha.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne left for a honeymoon to the northern lakes and will be at home after July 1 at 1326 South Forty-sixth street, Omaha.

Personals

Miss Mary Byer of Carroll, Ia., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. J. W. Kennebeck.

Dr. and Mrs. Grant Williams have returned from 19 days in Excelsior Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Porter announce the birth of a girl at the Lord Lister hospital on June 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Artemas Ireland report the birth of a boy at the Lord Lister hospital on June 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Veber announce the birth of a girl on June 3 at the Lord Lister hospital.

Mrs. Victor Caldwell, jr., left Tuesday evening for her girlhood home in St. Louis, where she will be until June 28.

Dr. and Mrs. H. B. Lemere have returned from a week in St. Louis, where Dr. Lemere attended a medical meeting.

Lieut. and Mrs. Richard Crane of Madison, Wis., arrived Tuesday for the wedding of Miss Emily Burke and Grenville Anderson.

Rev. and Mrs. D. J. Gallagher, Mrs. Ernest Shayler and Mrs. Philip Potter left Tuesday by motor for Central City, Neb., for a few days' visit.

Mrs. Aaron Vance McAlvay of Lansing, Mich., who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Stanley M. Rosewater, has returned to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. DeLacy and Dr. and Mrs. Clyde Roeder will motor to Lincoln June 21, to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Faulkner.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Caldwell have gone east by motor to attend the graduation exercises of their daughter, Julia, at Emma Willard school, Troy, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bergquist, whose wedding was solemnized on Monday, have departed for Holly, wood, where they will make their home. Mrs. Bergquist was formerly Mrs. Dora M. Perley.

Mrs. Reed Peters and small son, Robert Howe Peters, will leave Friday for a month in the east. On their return they will go immediately to Estes Park, where they will be until October. Mr. Peters will join them there.

Miss Phyllis Schurman of Denver, Colo., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Wallace Spear. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spear of Fremont, Neb., are also the guests of the Spears, and attended the Anderson-Burke wedding Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Johnson and their daughter Frances, who is senior in Central High school, returned Monday from Topeka, where they went to attend the May fete and baccalaureate sermon of Bethany college, where Frances is planning to attend school next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Baldrige leave Friday for Cleveland where they will attend the republican national convention, and then will go to New York where Mrs. Baldrige will remain with Mrs. Robert Daley while Mr. Daley and Mr. Baldrige go to Yale university at New Haven for their sixth reunion. Later the Baldriges will visit the Daleys in their Boston home.

Miss Adaline Kent and Miss Katherine Schwab left Tuesday night for the east, following their attendance as bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Emily Burke and Grenville Tremzlin Anderson. Miss Kent, whose home is in California, is on her way abroad, where she will study sculpting. Miss Schwab resides in New York.

Miss Corinne Elliott Weds Mr. Gaupel Leave for Honolulu Following Reception—150 Guests Call During Evening.

One hundred and fifty guests called at the reception given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Elliott for their daughter, Corinne, whose wedding to Roland Gaupel of St. Louis was solemnized at 3 o'clock in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride and groom with their attendants, Miss Elizabeth Elliott, sister of Mrs. Gaupel, and John Winn of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Elliott and Mrs. R. M. Gaupel of St. Louis, mother of the groom, formed a receiving line in front of the fireplace which, banked with ferns, palms and easter lilies, had formed the nuptial altar.

Both the bride and her sister wore the new bell-shaped gowns. The former's was of heavy white crepe, elaborately wrought in an orange blossom pattern in crystals and pearls, and fashioned without sleeves, and with an oval neckline. The skirt was slightly draped, and carried into a large bow at one side.

Orange blossoms were again the motif in the pearl embroidery on the long court train of satin, and these dewy blooms imported from California held a cup full of tulle in place. A band of tulle outlined this cap effect, emphasizing the line of her bobbed locks. A snowier bouquet of lilies of the valley formed the bridal bouquet.

The bride wore the gift of the groom, an emerald and diamond bracelet set in platinum, which matches her wedding ring, combining both these jewels, as does the setting of her diamond betrothal ring.

Miss Elliott's gown, of flesh lunette, was also embroidered in crystals, and was distinguished because of v shaped godets of pleating across the front of the hem line.

This costume, like the bride's, was without sleeves and featured an oval neckline. A huge bow of flesh satin at the back had trailing ends which formed a short train. Miss Elliott carried ophelia roses and sweetpeas, and wore a band of bluish-colored tulle in her hair, with a faintly tinted gardenia at one side.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.

Naturally she likes young friends. Perhaps if you and her sister would get another boy and make up some parties for a few good times, she would come to feel your sincere interest in her and give up her evil companions—if they are evil. Be sure you are not just a bit jealous before you condemn her friends, however.

MISS KATHLEEN. I am publishing your letter, though I should have your name and address before doing so. Send me your name and once, so that I can give you information should inquiries come to me.

Dear Martha Allen: For a long time I have come with two sisters without being in love with either one of them. I know their family well and have good times at their house. Now one of them is going with a crowd that I do not think are good enough for her to associate with. How can I stop her? She will think I am jealous if I interfere.

Never mind if the girl does think you are jealous. You are a good enough friend to her and to her family to have the right to talk with her and make her realize the truth, if you can. Youth longs for companionship.