Shenandoah Passes. Any Wet Plank? A Long Word "Eternal." Neanderthals Travel.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The airship Shenandoah, sailing toward Albany, above the Hudson, on Wednesday, passed the Twentieth Century, the fastest New York Central train coming from Chicago. The airship carried 120 human beings, the express train many more. The passengers on the fast train bent their necks looking upward, and thought how strange it was traveling up there in the air.

Early in the last century, when James Brisbane, father of the late Albert Brisbane, ran his primitive railroad trains from Rochester, N. Y., to Buffalo, passengers drawn by horses looked in amazement and thought how strange it was to be pulled by a machine that boiled water to make itself go.

In a few years that well appointed express train will be out of date as the stage coach is now.

The young Vanderbilt boys and George F. Baker, real boss of the New York Central, would do well to begin planning now for transportation through the air. They have the terminals, can raise money, and should see the warning written in the sky by smoke from the exhaust pipes of the big flying ship.

"What will the big parties do about prohibition?" That's the question, and the surest answer is that they will imitate skaters that skate around a hole in the ice.

With Al Smith of New York, of course, his mere nomination would be an out and out declaration against prohibition. In doing away with the Mullan-Gage act, Mr. Smith declared that the Volstead act was "the work of the fanatical drys."

Mr. Rodman Wanamaker has presented to New York "an eternal light" to burn "forever" in memories of soldiers killed in the world war. The light will be an electric star at the top of a tall mast in Madison Square Garden, and Mr. Wanamaker will endow it.

It is a patriotic thought, but what long words, those are "eternal" and "forever." The light that rises and sets every day as this earth turns around will go out eventually. It will not be eternal.

And how long will it be before another generation will look up at the eternal light and ask "I wonder what that's for?"

The Chicago Tribune sheds a tear because Chicagoans had to travel miles to see Carpenter fight Gibbons. Chicagoans having supplied 90 per cent of the cash for that fight, the Tribune thinks it should have been brought to their door.

That's a mistake. The best thing for a high intellect that demands the pleasure of prize fighting, seeing somebody else's nose bleed, is to travel as much as possible. Travel opens the mind.

The Neanderthal Culp of Chicago on their way to that fight in a private car doubtless looked out of the window between "melds," saw the little birds, and perhaps a darting field mouse, living proof of providence's watchful care. If so, they came home better. Perhaps somewhere in the Cro-Magnon division.

Last night, for the first time in history, 1,000,000 guests were present at a wedding on the radio. A million, or 10,000,000 might "tune in" on WEA, hear the marriage service, the faint "I do" of the bride and all the rest of it, including the music.

There have been many famous weddings since that of Alexander the Great, who made so many of his generals get married on the same day as himself, and for several days afterward. But this radio wedding is entirely new.

It foretells events more important. The day is coming when great teachers of the earth, in the quiet of their own libraries, will lecture, sending out learning through ether to the ears of 10,000,000 students.

That really may be called a cosmic university.

F. P. Smith of New York, talking to the Baptists in Milwaukee, accuses Dr. Butler, the head of Columbia college of New York, of treason because he objects to prohibition.

Treason begins only when men conspire to defeat the laws, and even that isn't exactly treason.

RED PIMPLES ON FACE AND HANDS

Festered and Scaled Over. Very Sore and Itched Badly. Cuticura Heals.

"Pimples broke out and covered my face and hands. At first the pimples were hard and red and then festered and scaled over and were very sore. They itched so badly that I scratched and irritated the affected parts causing the pimples to bleed.

The Way Madge Forced Mamie to Tell the Truth

Mamie's calm declaration that she knew nothing concerning the costly fur coats that Katie had brought from their concealment in our attic staggered me for a second or two. Could it be possible that Katie—?

One look at my little maid's convulsed face and eyes frenzied with anger convinced me, however, that Mamie, not she, was the one telling falsehoods, and I turned to the girl with a sternness aggravated by her affront.

"That is something very easily settled," I said feeling a trifle like Solomon of old. "I shall telephone the police at once, and ask them to take these coats and find out from whom they've been stolen."

"You may go now," I said sternly.

I looked at Mamie steadily. Her face was a shade paler than before, but her eyes met mine defiantly.

"I don't think you dare do that," she said impudently. "They're in your attic, not anywhere else. Maybe the police ask you some questions."

I rose abruptly. I guessed that the girl's impudence was only a mask for desperate terror, but she must not be permitted any further license of speech.

"You may go now," I said sternly.

"Katie, bring those coats downstairs and unwrap them, while I get the Southampton police station on the telephone. I want to give them a description of each garment."

Mamie shot furtive glances first at me and then at the bundles Katie was gathering up. Her lips parted as if to speak, and a muscle in her throat twitched convulsively, but she did not say anything, only walked out of the door as I had bidden her.

Katie looked at me with dumb questioning as we followed her to the lower floor, but I shook my head at her in a signal for silence. I knew pretty well what was in Mamie's mind for before my marriage I spent years stretched like her age. She would bluff until the very last second, and I pretended not to notice that while she had opened and closed the outer door she was standing inside of it instead of on the veranda.

I was afraid that Katie would betray her knowledge of the ruse, but may little maid kept her face absolutely expressionless, and as I looked down the telephone receiver, carefully shielding the instrument with my body that Mamie might not know my hand was holding down the hook, making a connection impossible, I smiled grimly to myself at the absurd game of wits with this alien girl in which Katie's folly had engaged me.

"Is this the Southampton police station?" I asked as if I were actually talking to the chief at the other end of the wire. "Yes? Then will you please send one of your men at once to—"

A little choking scream behind me and an exclamation of triumph from Katie made me turn quickly. Mamie was running toward me with outstretched hands and working face.

"Oh, I'll tell!" she sobbed. "I'll tell everything, if you won't have the police come."

I turned back to the telephone, spoke quickly.

"Never mind now," I said. "I find I do not need an officer. If I do later, I will call you."

Replacing the receiver on the hook I turned to the weeping Mamie. All the pity I might otherwise have felt for the girl had been submerged by her mean little attempt to throw the blame of her act upon Katie.

"If you do tell me the truth," I said sternly, "and you may be sure I shall know if you are not telling it. I shall call that policeman back at once. You are a very wicked girl to try to put the blame for your act upon Katie."

"I said her to hide them," Mamie retorted sullenly. "She must have known there was something funny about it."

"Und now I give your dirty money back!" Katie shrieked, flourishing the $10 bill I had given her to return to Mamie. I silenced my gesticulating little maid with a look, and held out my hand for the money which she gave me.

"How much did you give Katie?" I asked.

"She looked speculatively at both of us, and I saw that her cunning brain was debating the possibility of extorting some extra money from Katie. But I held her eyes steadily with mine, and after a minute, she spoke sullenly:

"Ten dollars."

What Is Neuritis?

Neuritis is an inflammation of the nerve that produces sharp darting pain very similar to that of rheumatism. In fact, the disease is often mistaken for rheumatism and treated as such, with the result that the sufferer gets no lasting benefit.

Neuritis is usually brought on by cold, injuries, bruises, nervous exhaustion, material poisoning or infectious diseases. The pain may be confined to one spot or it may move from place to place. Sometimes it is accompanied by soreness in the muscles, numbness in the hands or feet, lame back, stiff joints, eye strain or severe headache.

The only way to obtain permanent lasting relief is to treat the affected nerves—get rid of the inflammation. Epsa Neuritis Tablets are compounded for that very purpose. Harmless, pleasant and effective. A trial package will convince you. Price, $1.00.
