White Elephants.

Are you one of the hoarders? Do you cling tenaciously to jars, bottles, boxes, hats, wraps, dresses, shoes and curtains; newspapers, magazines, old letters?

Unless you live in a fairy-tale house, with unlimited storage room, closets galore, not to speak of vegetable and fruit cellar, don't do it. And even so, don't. As for your modern cliff dweller in a hall bedroom sized flat, don't save an unnecessary shoe.

Take a morning, a day or a week off, according to the magnitude of your sins of omission, and make a clean sweep of your useless possessions.

Throw out the handless dustpan, the decrepit brooms and brushes, and that ounce of dried up silver polish in your cleaning closet.

Go over your pantry or kitchen or kitchenette shelves and throw out those glass jars that merely collect dust on shelf space. Throw away the coffee tins and tin cracker boxes that are equally senseless. When you actually do need something of the sort the one you are using will soon be useful in a new capacity.

Dispose of the hats once so becoming and the cape cousin Jim admired long ago, but which you haven't worn for ages; also the evening gown that looks antediluvian, but was made of such beautiful material, and the shoes that cost such a wicked price and pinch so cruelly. Don't fill your closets with things lacking actual present value to you. Use common sense at the time of purchase and avoid future trouble.

And the atrocities! That lamp shade that's an eyesore, those pictures which positively screech at you, your other belongings—pitch 'em out. You will never in all probability make that scrapbook, so why pile up the magazines and papers? Old letters, with mighty few exceptions, are a snare and a delusion. Some of them mean little to you now and in the future will mean less; some will always hurt and help not at all; most of them are best destroyed.

There are any number of bona fide organizations eager to accept clothing and furnishings in good condition that have outworn their usefulness to their present owner. The shoes and coat you never wear will make some one comfortable. Furniture that is a bugbear in your home may fit in perfectly elsewhere.

"You've no idea what a joyous sensation of freedom you'll experience when you've literally cleaned your house of the clutterings of years."

Start right in, unload the white elephants.

Home From Eastern School

Ruth Vail Shotwell

One of the first arrivals from eastern schools is Miss Ruth Shotwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Shotwell, who will be with her parents on June 12, after a year at Eden Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.

Miss Shotwell, who has been pursuing a musical career, will continue her studies during the summer, and will return to Eden Hall in the fall. She has had unusual opportunities to meet celebrities in the musical world, through frequent visits with her aunt, Mrs. Christine Brooks of New York, a musician of note.

Miss Shotwell, talented artistically, took the lead in her class play this year. She was also active in the school athletics, playing on the basket ball team.

The Powder Room.

It is called the powder room and may be found in many of the newest houses, but it is not a private arsenal, as the name suggests. Mrs. Devah Adams, an interior decorator, well known in New York for her fascinating interior, reproducing 18th century French styles, revived the name.

Mrs. Adams tells of the origin of the powder room—in the days when high coiffures and powdered wigs were worn, the last gesture in making the complete toilet was powdering the hair. This gave rise to the powder room, which opened into the hall, a moderate sized orifice through which the heads of arriving guests were thrust to receive the final attentions of a maid or valet behind the scenes. The modern counterpart of the powder room is also for arriving guests who wish to give the last attentions to their appearance. In this room, which is downstairs, as was its French precursor, a maid waits on the arrivals and they enter the drawing room reassured by a last minute inspection of costumes and complexion. The vils are only vain. The great are proud.—Atlanta Georgian.

Dresher Brothers Have Refrigeration Plant

Safe to Store Orientals, Furs and Clothing Before Vacations.

When you go away for the summer, it is safe to store your fine orientals and your clothing at Dresher Brothers' storage vault.

To assure a constant temperature of less than 32 degrees Fahrenheit, Dreshers maintain a refrigeration plant. The vault itself operates like a huge safe and, as a satisfaction to each customer, every garment is hung on a separate hanger. Only thoroughly clean clothes and rugs stored.

Dresher Brothers are not only dyers and cleaners, but hatters, tailors, rug cleaning experts, and maintain a cold storage vault for furs, rugs and clothing.

Their main office and plant is located at 2211, 2213, 2215, 2217 Farnam street with branches at Brandeis, Burgess-Nash, Dresher the Tailor, 1515 Farnam street, and on the South Side at 4635 South Twenty-fourth street.

Care of the Skin.

After a dusty motor ride or a day spent in freeing the household of dust—and transferring a large part of it to your own person—there is suggested a cleansing cream. This is spread carefully, with a light circular motion, over the cheeks—up from corners of mouth and eyes. Don't forget to go over your throat very carefully. And don't attempt the vigorous methods which might do for polishing silver. Work it in lightly. Then with a piece of soft linen or one of those exquisite paper tissues which are made for the purpose wipe it off carefully.

At night, or when you have leisure, you will supplement this by a very heavy cream, which is gently rubbed on the skin to improve its texture and surface. It's particularly good for crows-feet, lines under the eyes, and those furrows of thought which are supposed to be interesting but which we can all very well do without. After leaving this on for a moment you remove it carefully from the nose and chin and wherever there is a tendency to hair growth.

A tonic lotion is then lightly patted in with a piece of cotton to contract the pores and leave the skin smooth and white. This is to be used whenever the creams are removed, also. Last of all comes your makeup, unless you are naturally snow-white and rosy-red already. A little color is excellent for the morale. A paste rouge is recommended, as best for dry skins, and a powder that is made on a cold-cream base. Find your own shade of powder, too—by the way—From the Designer Magazine for June.

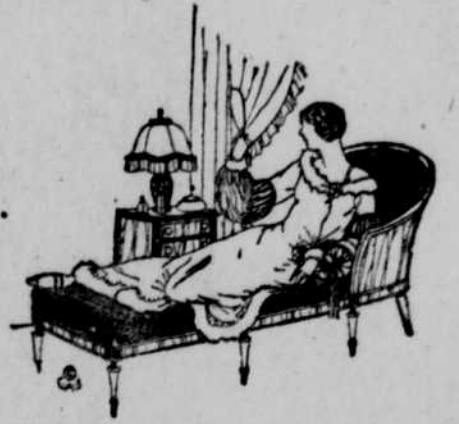

Hand and Foot.

The red sandal that thrilled the cake eater and the finale hopper on Broadway last season has gone, but it has been superseded by gloves of the same brilliant hue. Emerald, cerise, blue and all the fortissimo notes of the spectrum are found in the 1924 flapper's handwear. Sometimes a single color is used alone, but as often the glove itself may be a conservative gray, white or beige, on which figures or designs in brilliant hues have been painted or embroidered.

A returning merchant declares that there is little prospect for change in fall coat lines in Paris. Straight lines continue.

Large flowers, often red or yellow and poised on the tip of a brim, were a striking millinery feature at the luncheon hour at Pierre's one day this week.

A cleverly tailored effect was accomplished by a woman wearing a mannish black hair-line coat of three-quarter length and a small black tricorn hat.
