THE WHITE HOUSE,

The young men of America have always shown patriotic devotion to the country in time of stress. They have an opportunity today of preparation for service in time of peace. The Government has established the Citizens' Military Training Camps, which are essentially schools in which alone has been offered the plan of national defense by selected officers of the Regular Army, the various Guard and the Reserve Corps, under a discipline for adapted to camps as an essential in the plan of national security. They promote obedience to law and respect for the institutions of a well-ordered society. Young men are helped to physical health, mental vigor and moral excellence. Social understanding and democratic feeling are developed; love and reverence for the flag are the natural outcome of the training. Courtesy in act, sympathy in feeling, tolerance in thought, are the ideals.

Recognizing the great good which comes to Government and to people from the Citizens' Military Training Camps, I hope that each young man take advantage of the opportunity which is afforded them.

Honorable J. A. O. Preus, Governor of the State of Minnesota, states:

"These camps afford a splendid opportunity for young men to receive mental, moral and physical training and wholesome recreation at nominal cost. But the benefit of these camps is not confined to the young men who participate. The lessons in patriotism which these young men receive are reflected in all the communities in which they live. The Americanization training given at these camps benefits the whole country."

Honorable Charles W. Bryan, Governor of the State of Nebraska, states:

"The Citizens' Military Training Camps represent concretely the thought of patriotism, civic responsibility and individual growth in all that makes for clean, healthy, vigorous American manhood.

Discipline I consider absolutely essential both in the youth and in the mature man and as these training camps call for a discipline that is almost entirely self-imposed, I consider their good effects greater perhaps than any that might be imposed otherwise; it encourages initiative and gives young men confidence in their abilities and as it brings together young men from all walks of life, it has a tendency to broaden their views and create a respect for constituted authority. Add to this the material physical benefits received from 30 days of rugged camp life with regular hours and pure wholesome food, and I have no hesitancy in endorsing the system and I hope the year of 1924 will register Nebraska with her full quota of young men attending these camps."

Honorable N. E. Kendall, Governor of the State of Iowa, states:

"I am very glad indeed to add my indorsement to the Citizens' Military Training Camps which are being instituted everywhere throughout the country. In my opinion no greater work of Americanization has been developed than this. The objects of these camps are to improve the young men of the land physically, mentally, and morally; to instruct them as to their duties as citizens; and to awaken a realization of their obligations to their country. All this is excellent and the enterprise has resulted splendidly wherever it has been undertaken."

Honorable Jonathan M. Davis, Governor of the State of Kansas, states:

"I express myself as heartily in favor of the Citizens' Military Training Camps for the purpose indicated in your Free Summer Camp pamphlet, sent me as an indorsement and under the Plattsburg idea referred to therein."

Honorable W. H. Meddator, Governor of the State of South Dakota, states:

"I understand that the objects of these camps are to improve the young men of the country, mentally, morally and physically, also to teach them their duty as American citizens. Certainly there is no more worthy object than this, and these training camps should receive the hearty indorsement of those who believe in better citizenship."

FROM THE CLERGY.

His Grace, the Most Reverend Archbishop Harty in a letter to the Seventh Corps Area Citizens' Training Camps Office expresses himself as heartily in favor of the Camps, stating that he will take an active interest in the campaign and wishes success to the good work.

1

Because it develops young men mentally, morally and physically; it teaches them discipline and responsibility, which is the core of good citizenship.

2

Because it provides practical and invaluable physical development through clean sports, recreation and outdoor living. Outdoor games and sports are under the direct supervision of experts and individual attention is given to the correction of all minor bodily defects and advice given as to corrective measures in exercise.

3

Because it stimulates and promotes better citizenship and patriotism, and through expert physical direction, athletic coaching and military training, benefits young men individually and brings them to fully realize their obligations to their country.

4

Because it encourages co-operation and "team work"—which is more valuable to young men than the ability to compete. Here the young men of high type from all sections of the country meet on a common basis of equality and under the most favorable condition of outdoor life.

5

Because it teaches young men the rudiments of military training and a higher regard for country, flag and home. With no thought of making professional soldiers, it places young men in better position to account for themselves in a national emergency.

6

Because it is FREE of all expense. The government provides free railroad fare to and from camp, food, uniforms, equipment and medical and dental care while at camp.
