

Physicians Say No Improvement

Nation Anxious Over Condition of President's Son III With Blood Poisoning.

Washington, July 5.—Anxiously watching for a sign of improvement in the condition of Calvin Coolidge, Jr., son of the president, in his fight against acute septic poisoning, the White House reluctantly announced at noon today there had been no improvement during the night and morning and the case continued "very serious."

The 16-year-old boy is making a strong battle against the infection, which has spread throughout his system as a result of a blister on the foot sustained in playing tennis. Another conference of doctors was held early today and afterward it was said the patient was still very ill. Following its usual course the poison in its spread has caused high fever and intense pain. Those in consultation were Major Coupal and Lieutenant Commander Boone, the White House physicians; Dr. C. W. Richardson, Washington specialist, and Col. William L. Keller of Walter Reed hospital. Colonel Keller is an expert in poison cases.

Treatment is centered on localizing the disease, after which it may be possible to draw the poison from the body. Meanwhile much depends upon the vitality of the patient. After the consultation the physicians maintained their silence, but appeared solemn as they left the White House. The president was at his office as usual early today, but left for a while in the middle of the morning to take a walk about the White House grounds. He conferred with Secretary Wilbur on government business and made one other appointment. All engagements for the day, however, were subject to cancellation. Mrs. Coolidge is remaining constantly at the bedside of her son.

RUM VIOLATORS' LAST HOPE GONE

Hopes of Omaha bootleggers whose cases still are pending in federal court were blasted Saturday by a telegram received by J. E. Kinster, United States district attorney, from Federal Judge John F. McGee, stating that the judge will return to Omaha Monday morning to continue court. Judge McGee returned to his home in St. Paul to spend the Fourth of July, and many persons facing liquor charges had faint hopes that some circumstance might prevent his return. His wire states that he will remain on the bench here for the remainder of this term of court and instruct Kinster to have all booze cases ready to submit to him, beginning at 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Keller, 462 South Thirty-eighth avenue, has resigned from the navy, in which he held rank of lieutenant commander, and on September 15 will become New England manager for the Tidewater Oil Sales company of New York. His headquarters will be in Boston. He entered the naval academy in 1907 from Omaha and was graduated in 1911. He served overseas during the world war and since has been chief engineer in charge of construction in the shipyards at Quincy, Mass.

DRY CAMPAIGN IS BEARING FRUIT

Stiff fines and liberal jail sentences, meted out to convicted bootleggers in federal court by Judge John P. McGee, have not been without their effect in "drying up" Omaha, according to Robert Samardick, chief prohibition enforcement officer. Since Thursday, Samardick and his men have raided six places, finding only empty barrels and bottles in each raid, with one exception, when a buried still was unearthed. Not a drop of evidence could be obtained. Liquor prices are said to be soaring as a result of Judge McGee's campaign against violators of the liquor amendment.

Safe and Sane Fourth Here

Parks Crowded All Day; Big Fireworks at Fontenelle.

Omaha celebrated the Fourth of July in a real "safe and sane" fashion yesterday. Only a few accidents were reported to central police station, where police surgeons were in readiness to answer the numerous calls that have come on previous July Fourths. Johnny Lee, heavyweight prize fighter, while shooting fireworks downtown, held one too long and it exploded in his hand, blowing the thumb from his left hand. Irvin Morgan, 8, Harrison boulevard, suffered a lacerated right hand, when a toy cannon exploded in his right hand. He was taken to the South Side hospital.

Nearly $100 worth of damage was done to goods in the display window of the Lida's Dry Goods store, Thirtieth and William streets, when a misdirected rocket crashed through the plate glass, setting fire to the contents of the window. Although the popping of firecrackers started early and continued late, apparently the majority of citizens of Omaha were content to spend their Fourth in a more quiet fashion. The parks, baseball diamonds, and golf links were crowded, while the highways leading out of the city were densely packed with automobile parties headed for picnics in the country. Fontenelle park was the scene of one of the biggest Fourth of July celebrations in the history of Omaha. Although there were more than 10,000 less than last year, the affair was considered a great success, especially from the financial point of view. A collection was taken up at the grounds for the fireworks, which is one of the big expenses, and this collection amounted to more than the cost.

Every County Represented. The cost of the entire celebration was less than $3,000, according to Karl Kehm, financial manager. The cost of the fireworks alone was about $1,500. The Fontenelle Park Celebration association has built up a reputation that is now extending throughout the state and into other states. An official check was kept yesterday of the auto licenses on cars from out of the county. There were cars from practically every county in Nebraska, and from 21 counties in Iowa. The number of states represented was 21. The nature of the day was the fireworks display which started at 8:00 p. m. as it was dark and was witnessed by the largest crowd that assembled in the park all day. Fully 25,000 cars were parked within the limits of Fontenelle park.

Thirty-five Athletic Events. Thirty-five athletic events were run off during the day, starting at 2 o'clock. Horse-shoe pitching contests were also going on most of the time, with Charles McLeland in charge. The Fontenelle Park Celebration association band furnished music from 2 to 4 and 6 to 9. Jack Gillogly sang with the band accompaniment. The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks No. 3 baseball team won the first game from the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy nine, 5 to 1. In the other game, the Sam Ellis team won from the U. P. Engineers with a score of 3 to 2.

Ballard Dunn Speaker of Day. Ballard Dunn, editor-in-chief of The Omaha Bee, was the speaker of the day. He urged that out of the celebration and the fun of the day there should be taken for serious thoughts. "There is never a better occasion for thinking seriously," said Mr. Dunn, "than upon our nation's birthday."

Particularly is this true now, when so many big problems press upon us for solution. Since that day in 1776 there has come about, not only the political revolution which made us a new nation, but an industrial revolution. As a result of the invention of machinery and the application of science to industry it is necessary for us to do the business of the world in ever increasing units. As a result of this fact most of the problems of today are economic, not political. "As our industries have grown in size and our economic problems grown with them we have not made it possible for industry, collectively, to cope with and readjust those problems. In fact, we have done everything we can do to prevent industry from coping with them. Industry Must Solve Problems. "If we were to wipe out so-called 'big business' today we would have to set it up tomorrow if we were to have not only the comforts of modern life, but its necessities. "Big business brings its problems with it, but they will not be solved through government ownership and government operation. We hear on all sides of us today appeals for the government to take over this and that and take over that. When the problems of industry are solved they will be solved by industry itself, and some day in the not distant future we will set up the machinery to make it possible for it to do so."

Bryan Wins Chinning Marathon in Democratic Olympic Games

By "BUGS" BAER, Universal Service Staff Correspondent. Madison Square Garden, New York, July 4.—The democratic persons and others still have 1,989 wobbly athletes in the gabbling Olympics. They have worn all the field and track events and are going after the shave, shine and shampoo titles. Among the home brewed athletes who starred for the glorious old works were Smith, Underwood, McAdoo, Raiston, Walsh and scattering. Walsh launched the flapping old suburbs off to a good start when he tossed the 16-pound gavel for the full minority distance. In the chinning marathon, which is the grand prize of all Olympics, "Bill" Bryan plugged along for the full buzzing distance and pinned the honors on Nebraska's lapels. The obstacle race was lost by Al Smith after a great race. He managed to hon over the beer kegs all right. But he got jammed in one of McAdoo's tunnels. After the Norwegian team had won the ski-jumping event, Walsh came back and threw the 56-pound gavel into the galleries. He was cheered to a sick echo. The coast-to-coast relay team consisted of McAdoo, Rockwell, Sinclair and a neighbor's child. They were opposed by the Tammany marching club with Al Smith, Tom Taggart, the Wisconsin delegation and a bow-legged proxy as the anchor man. McAdoo made a false start and was penalized a yard of votes. Climbing the runless ladder was won by Carter Glass of Virginia. "Bill" and Charley Bryan were the favorites in the three-legged race. Belowing the hokum for distance, accuracy and usefulness, was won by Newton Baker. Next ran in the colors of the league of nations. Bryan came to the front again when he won the plunge into the apple sauce with a dive of 3,900 miles. Starting late and getting nowhere was the big event on the curdled program. It was won by David Houston. Crawling up the greased platform was won by McAdoo. Walking the slack wires was a deadlock between Joe Daniels and a mysterious stranger. America is still supreme in athletics and unadorned monotony. (Copyright, 1924.)

Dudley, Human Semaphore, Fined

Former Associates Charge He Embarrassed Them Before Prisoners.

J. J. Dudley, erstwhile "human semaphore," was fined $25 in municipal court Saturday morning on the charge of disturbing the peace, following testimony of Joe Potach and Heinie Bosen, police officers, that he interfered with their efforts to maintain order among prisoners in federal court. Potach testified that Dudley made remarks to prisoners in his custody which embarrassed his attempt to keep order. The officers told the judge the former traffic officer advised one prisoner to "call Jim Dahlman, he'll help you out." Bosen on the stand said Dudley stopped Elmer McNally one of the prisoners who was sentenced to two years in the county jail on a liquor charge and advised him to get in touch with Tom Dennison. When Bosen remonstrated with Dudley for talking to a prisoner he testified, the latter called him names and attempted to strike him. Fleeth cuffs followed, which terminated in the arrest of Dudley by Potach. Dudley denies the remarks attributed to him by his former fellow officers and introduced Jerry Howard, John A. Benjamin and R. W. Brennan, 1811 Paul street, as witnesses to prove that he was not the aggressor in the traffic officer announced. The former traffic officer announced that he would appeal the case and was held in custody, pending the filing of an appeal bond.
