Legs Less Important.
Old Ideas Stick.
Alas, Poor Newport!
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

"Travel forms youth, when it does not deform it." Willie Ritola won the Olympic 10,000-meter race, beating the world's record, which belonged to him, by 12 1-5 seconds.

Ritola, born in Finland, came to the United States when 10 years old, had his training here, and went back to win glory for his native country in France.

Once, ability to run 10,000 meters at such high speed might have meant the saving of a kingdom. Now it means only an interesting achievement.

An automobile costing a few hundred dollars will go the distance in less than half the time. A flier will fly it in less than a quarter of the time. Wireless will carry any message seven times around the world in a second. The muscles of your legs are not as important as they were. The gray matter in your brain and the training of that gray matter is just as important. Young gentlemen might remember that.

England clings to the idea that to be an island is to be safe. The British government definitely decided yesterday against building a tunnel under the channel between France and England. "Imperial defense" is the reason. But England is an island no longer. The air, not the ocean, is the fighting place today. No more Napoleon will wander up and down the French side of the channel, wondering how to cross.

France can declare war on England at 8 in the morning. The stroy London, including the king's palace, conveniently at 10 that same morning.

However, the conservatives drop old ideas reluctantly.

Miss Esther Morton Smith of Philadelphia, niece of the late Joseph Wharton, a Newport resident in summer, tells the world that Newport is "afflicted with immorality and drunkenness." Miss Smith finds bottles on the lawn of her Newport cottage, thrown by servants of the neighborhood. There are flasks on the hips of young gentlemen that dance or go down to the beach. And where you have

"hard liquor" used by the young, you are apt to have immorality. But prohibition, which for the present seems to include bootlegging, must have its opportunity. The people have decided upon that.

The socialist committee advises the socialist party to support La Follette for president, naming no socialist candidate.

That might cost La Follette more votes than it would give. He would lose the votes of those who know nothing about the socialist party and believe it to be a mixture of communism, free love, atheism and other ingredients with which real socialism has nothing to do.

From Shanghai comes news that the Chinese have found a George Washington to lead them. Chan Lim Hak is his name and, like our George, he is one of the richest men in his country, worth $30,000,000.

It is one thing to have a George Washington for leader, quite another thing to have the right crowd of followers.

The right followers are at least as important as the right leaders. You might send 300 George Washingtons to lead the 300,000,000 Indians of India, and they couldn't throw off the British yoke.

United States athletes set new records in the Olympic games yesterday.

Robert Legendre of Newark, N. J., covered 25 feet, 6 inches, in the broad jump, beating the world's record by three inches. F. Morgan Taylor of Iowa, cov-

One little life flickered out last night which could have been saved with proper nourishment. It is terrible to realize that such things can happen in a civilized world. But they do.
