Admits It Bubonic Plague.
CHICAGO, April 14.—A dispatch from Ann Arbor, Mich., says:
Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, dean of the medical department, and one of the most noted bacteriologists in the country, appeared before the state board of health yesterday and practically admitted that the case of Student Chas. B. Hare is one of bubonic plague. He assured the board that there would be no spread of the disease, as all precautions had been taken to prevent it and the student will recover. Dr. Vaughan told the board that Hare contracted the disease by an accident identical with that which occurred in Vienna, in which Professor Nothnagel and his assistant, Barisch, were conducting bacteriological experiments on bubonic plague bacilli. Barisch caught the disease and died, as did also Dr. Muller, who attended him.

Short and Sour.
There had been a small bank failure, and the bank had gone into the hands of a receiver. The receiver had proved to be dishonest and had absconded with what remained of the funds of the institution. Expert detectives, however, were on his track, and he was run to earth in a mountain town and taken back to the scene of his financial exploits.
It was after midnight when the detectives arrived with their prisoner, and Mr. Means, the principal depositor in the bank and therefore the principal loser, was awakened at his home and informed by telephone of the capture.
He expressed his gratification and went back to bed.
Shortly afterward he was aroused to receive another telephone message to the same effect from a different source. "Thanks," he said, "but I had heard of it already. Good night!"
And again he sought his couch.
About 2 o'clock he was awakened a third time. The telephone bell was ringing.
In no gentle frame of mind he answered it.
"Hello!" he said.
"Hello!" responded a voice through the telephone. "Is this Mr. Means?"
"Yes. What do you want?"
"Mr. Means, this is Deputy Sheriff Jones. We've caught that runaway receiver. Is there anything you'd like to have me do personally in the matter?"
"Yes!" roared Mr. Means. "Hang up the receiver!"
And he was not disturbed again.—Youth's Companion.

Mark Twain and the Serpent's Tooth.
Mark Twain's daughter, Miss Clara L. Clemens, in entering upon her career as a concert singer, had a long conference with a manager. Many matters were discussed, plans made and details settled, Miss Clemens dictating her own ideas. The young singer, who had experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining parental consent to a public career, showed her earnestness by the businesslike manner in which she looked into affairs.
When matters had been fully considered and the manager was about to leave, Miss Clemens said, with the large determination that small bodies not infrequently possess:
"I wish it distinctly understood that my father's name is not to be mentioned at all in connection with my singing in public."
Mark Twain, who had been sitting in the room during the interview, in which, however, he had taken no part, looked up quizzically and said, with a twinkle in his eyes:
"You see what it is to have a thankful child!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Did They?
There is nothing much more distressing than an unfinished story. A number of people in a London drawing room were conversing about capital punishment when a lady remarked:
"How strange it must seem to be sentenced to death!"
"Not so very, very strange, I assure you. I was myself once condemned to death in Africa," said a returned African explorer.
"Indeed!" exclaimed the lady. "And were you—did they?"
"Did they what, madame?"
"Why, did they execute you, you know?"—Exchange.

When Corks Float Upright.
A cork which is longer than it is broad, which is the case with all ordinary corks, floats upon its side, so to speak. How can we make it float upon its head?
Place one on end upon a table and around it place six others. Seize them all together and plunge them under water so as to wet them completely. Then remove your hand gently and let them take their own position in the water, when you will find that they will stand upright, as if supporting one another. This is because the water that penetrates the cork will make them cling together.

Railroading in Ireland.
A somewhat nervous English tourist vouches for the genuineness of the following incident of Irish traveling: The train arrived some 20 minutes late at a small station, and the engine driver inquired of the station master, "Did the express go by yet, Tim?" "It did not," was the answer. There was indecision on the part of the engine driver for a moment when he cheerfully exclaimed, "Ah, well; we must chance it!" as he blew the whistle and started off on the single line.—London Outlook.

Boiled Water in Ancient Times.
Now that the use of boiled drinking water has become common, it is interesting to be reminded that a similar method of guarding against disease was practiced in ancient times. Herodotus tells how Cyrus had his drinking water boiled and carried in silver vessels, and Pliny the elder relates that Nero had water boiled and afterward cooled for drinking by placing it in glass flasks surrounded with snow.

Laureate Nonsense.
Tennyson is said to have been fond of foolish fun, that ever delightful sort of fun which is not wit, but nonsense. One day, at Burlington House, he asked the guests a conundrum which he had just made:
"Who are the greatest women in the world?"
The answer was:
"Miss Ouri, the Misses Ippi and Sara Gossa."
