THE BLUE RACER.

It Is About the Fleetest Thing In the

Reptile Family. "The swiftest snake I have ever known is the blue racer, as we used to call the reptile in the Arkansas foothills, and I want to tell you this particular snake can travel like a blue streak," said a man from Arkansas. "The fact is, the name 'blue racer' was given to the snake because of the repdart across the road at such a rapid pace that you could only see a mere suggestion of blue, and if you did not happen to know the snake and its habits you would not know what it was. You could not possibly get the idea that it was a snake you had seen flash through the dust of the country road unless you knew something of the blue racer. Just what speed the snake makes I do not know, but it is a rapid pace. The rattlesnake is supposed to have good speed, and, as a matter of fact, the rattler can whiz along at a would be interesting to know just how fast different snakes travel, and if we knew I dare say we would find that the blue racer is about the fleetest thing in the reptile family." - New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ANTIQUITY OF SILK.

The Product Was Worth Its Weight In Gold For Centuries.

The Chinese empress Si-ling-Chi, 2050 B. C., was supposed to be the first woman to dress herself in silken raiment, though silk was used in the arts nearly placed among the Chinese divinities under the title of "Sien-Thsan," which means "first promoter of the silk in-

Silk was worth its weight in gold in many parts of the world for centuries. Its immense cost may be estimated by the fact that a silken garment is mentioned as one of the wanton prodigalities of the Emperor Heliogabalus, while a gown of the same material was refused by Aurelius to his empress on the ground that he couldn't afford the price. Such was the importance of the silk | ite literary form, and, quite apart from industry in China that the people in the | the inexhaustible fund of humorous acprincipal growing and manufacturing district took the name of "Seres" and their country "Serica," from the word "Se," which in the ancient writings world, while the finished product is among the most costly of merchandise.

VENETIAN WOMEN.

They Have No Need to Bother Their Heads About Fashions.

The women of Venice are absolutely free from the rule which Dame Fashion exercises over their sisters elsewhere. They care nothing for modes. With them the length of the skirt remains always the same, neither short nor long, and they always wear plainly made dark dresses, black stockings and the heelless slippers of the east. Hats are unknown.

The universal outdoor wrap for all ages and all sizes is the black shawl, with a deep silken fringe. It is folded with a short point above and a long one below, and sometimes it envelopes the figure from head to foot. It is never fastened at the throat, and when it slips off it is gathered up with one outstretched arm, which makes the spectator think of a big bird stretching its wing.

In their attire the women of Venice are independent, only wearing local clothing, but, with feminine inconsistency, they are thoroughly up to date in the matter of hairdressing, the style of their coiffures changing from time to time, according to the vogue of the moment in London and Paris.

A Rishop's Fall.

Bishop Peck of the Methodist church was a large man, weighing over 350 pounds. While on a tour and stopping at the residence of a presiding elder the bishop turned over in his bed and the entire furniture collapsed, dropping him to the floor with a tremendous thud. The presiding elder rushed upstairs, calling: "What is the matter, bishop? Is there anything I can do for you?" "Nothing is the matter," answered the bishop, "but if I don't answer the call to breakfast tell your wife to look for me in the cellar."

As in the case of so many of Shakethem on the printed page. "Diligence is the mother of success" seems obvious enough, but the man who first enshrined it in speech was a genius. "He whom God helps is better off than the man who gets up early" is a bit of worldly experience that comes home even now to many a doubter as to whether we "get our deserts," while Cromwell's "Trust God and keep your powder dry" was anticipated by Sancho's "Pray to God, but hammer away." Another shrewd piece of observation from the same source might save many a tradesman from loss to this day, "He who does not mean to pay does not haggle about price," and the homely scrap of philosophy in which Sancho warns the world against stretching out the leg farther than the sheet that covers it is as necessary and pertinent now as it ever was.-London

ROOF GARDEN FOR LONDON.

Formerly a Private Garden of the Duke of Westminster.

The first of London's public roof gardens will be opened in a few weeks at an electric supply company's new transforming station in Duke street, Grosvenor square, Westminster, says the London Express. It will be laid out in the Italian style, and it opens up possibilities in the utilization of many wasted spaces on the top of London buildings. If it proves a success the metropolis may soon be graced with many similar attractions.

The site of the building was formerly a private garden belonging to the Duke of Westminster, but the corporation obtained permission to build upon it on condition that they made and undertook to maintain a roof garden which should always be kept open to the public between sunrise and sunset.

The architect has so arranged the building that the roof garden is only eight feet above the pavement. This was done by the ingeniously simple method of putting the greater part of the engine room underground. The garden is entered by flights of steps on either side of two magnificent pavilions placed at each end and is bordered by a handsome stone railing. The whole structure is built of Portland stone, and the actual extent of the open space available for the public will be about 250 by 60 feet,

Among the attractions of the garden will be an ornamental fountain, while flower beds will be kept gay with color from early spring to autumn, with trees growing in tubs to complete the picture. Seats, of course, will be provided, and Westminster's "garden in the air" promises to be one of the most restful and picturesque spots in Lon-

Dinners With "Hurry Up" Costumes. No, indeed; the love for "dressing up" has not worn itself out in Newport, says the New York Press. Though fancy dress dances naturally are not as much in vogue as in winter, fancy dress dinners are proving a delight for man. The idea had birth in rainy day boredom in English country houses, where guests were requested to come to dinner in costume. The shorter time given the greater the fun, as much ingenuity has to be used to make up a dress from materials immediately at hand. An unwritten law of the game is that there must be no consultations with costumers and no unfair advantage taken of the resources of town. It is astounding what original and amusing "makeups" can be devised when time presses and dinner waits, and the diners derive far more amusement from a dinner of this kind, where one's looks depend on one's ingenuity, than from one entailing greater outlay.
