TWENTY-FOURTH YEAR

McCOOK, RED WILLOW COUNTY, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 5, 1906

NUMBER 32

Clark-Stangland.

Last Sunday evening at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Knud K. Stangland of our city their eldest daughter Miss Hannah Sofia and Mr. Ira Joseph Clark were happily wedded in the presence of relatives and a few nearest friends of the contracting parties, Rev. M. B. Carman officiating and using a simple, pretty ring ceremony. The bride wore a handsome and becoming turquoise blue silk.

Miss Kersten Stangland was bridesmaid. She was dressed in white, as was also Miss May Stangland, who played the wedding march as the bridal party assumed position in the parlor for the ceremony. Mr. Ray Pool, a State University boy and friend of the groom, was best man.

The residence was profusely decorated with holly, with a large bouquet of dark red carnations in the parlor and a large bouquet of pink and white carnations in the dining room.

After the ceremony was spread an elaborate four-course dinner at two large tables, Mrs. A. P. Welles, Mrs. J. R. Frederickson and Mrs. Mary Walker assisting. Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Welles were the only guests outside the two families.

Mr. and Mrs. Knud Stangland of Havelock, Miss May Stangland and Mr. Ray Pool of Lincoln were out-of-town guests, and they accompanied the young couple to Lincoln on 2, Monday morning. The bride's going-away gown was a dark blue silk.

Both bride and groom are graduates of the McCook high school and the bride has been a teacher in the system for about seven years. The bride spent two years in the State University, of which the groom is a medical department graduate.

No more youthful young friends have ever launched out on seas matrimonial from this city and THE TRIBUNE has a personal pleasure in wishing them bon voyage.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark go to Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he will do post-graduate work in the famous medical department of the great university.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Notes on new novels, by Mary Moss: "The Belted Seas," by Arthur Colton.

Mr. Colton's "Belted Seas" is as pleasantly entertaining as if some of Mr. Jacob's home-biding captains had venturesomely gone out to sea with a ship's company recruited by Stevenson, Conrad and Louis Becke. His stories are with that flavor of spicy islands which acts as a welcome condiment.

"The Master Word" by L. H. Hammond is not perhaps a better book than many I am passing without mention. The trouble arising from an unfortunate mulatto girl are not met as if she alone were responsible for her mixed blood. Taken in its place, it is full of significance, and should be neglected by no one who wishes to follow contemporary conditions.

Turning to English novels of society, "The Marriage of William Ashe" strengthens a purely imaginary theory, suggested by Mrs. Ward's recent books. She is rigidly bound to characters already developed. Rails are laid upon which she needs must travel. In "William Ashe" Mrs. Ward really had a problem made to her hand; she goes little into rights and wrongs of marriage, consequently it does not afford her that sense of personal exasperation upon which the born-tendency writer must ever depend for a supply of heat and movement.

ELEVATED TRACK FALLS

The Entire Elevated Track at the Coal Chute Collapses.

ENGINE AND SIX COAL CARS

Are Precipitated to the Ground—Engine Uninjured—Coal Cars and Track Smashed—No One Severely Injured.

About eight o'clock, last Friday night, the entire elevated track in connection with the Burlington coal chutes at this place collapsed, just after six loaded coal cars had been run upon to the track. The switch engine and six cars were thrown to the ground. The coal cars were considerably damaged, but the engine escaped with small damage, maintaining a perfectly upright position on the rails, notwithstanding its fall of 15 to 20 feet from the top of the incline.

Engineer Clyde Scott escaped injury entirely.

Fireman A. L. Palmer received a dislocated shoulder.

Brakeman Earl Kelley sustained slight back and face injuries.

A force of men under C. E. Emerson at once went to work to attempt to clear up the wreckage, and they have been engaged in the work most of the week, the undertaking being a large one and requiring a considerable force of men and the big wrecker in addition.

The damage will run way up into the hundreds of dollars—while the inconvenience and loss caused by having to coal engines by shoveling has been and will be considerable. No little difficulty has been experienced in getting men to shovel. An incident this week, was the strike of the entire Italian force engaged in this work. Their places were filled by drafts from the steel gang and construction gang up west.

The structure wrecked was built years ago when cars of 30 to 40 tons capacity were in vogue. Cars now used are of the 100-ton sort. The fact of the additional load, together with the continued hitting of the bumper, and its consequent somewhat weakened condition, will perhaps fully explain the cause of the collapse.

The company is however, as well as the employees, to be congratulated upon the outcome of the accident as regards loss of life or injury to person. Those slightly injured are all able to be about as usual.

The cause of the accident is thus described in the Lincoln Journal:

The collapse of the Burlington coal chute track at McCook Friday evening, as told in yesterday's Journal, is explained by the statement that when the six loaded coal cars were run on the track they were sent too far, and that one 100-ton coal car was shunted violently against the "bumping post" with such force that the elevated structure was pulled loose from its mooring, and that it did not collapse, exactly, but fell to the ground by breaking away from the track-connected end and dropping the full length of the timbers underneath it. This accounts for the engine and cars touching the ground right side up and for the escape of the trainmen who went down with it.

A similar accident is said to have occurred on the Sheridan division of the road last fall, while a similar accident although not serious enough to pull the elevated track to the ground, happened in the Rock Island yards in this city three or four years ago.

A Burlington official expresses the belief that the road will build a line from St. Francis to Pueblo, Col., in the very near future, and that the iron ore tonnage from Hill's Minnesota mines and the mines in the vicinity of Guernsey, Wyoming, will grow as time goes on. Further he expresses the belief that the line from North Platte will reach the Cheyenne line of the road some place near Eustis, bringing in that traffic by the way of Holdrege.—Lincoln Journal.

Hoping by fair and square treatment and by making irresistible prices that will save you money to merit your continued patronage and good will we remain,
