Legend of a Book.
A quaint and kindly legend, illustrating the sorrow devout Christians used to feel for the paganism of their favorite classic authors, is that of St. Cadoc and his Virgil. St. Cadoc, whose day is Jan. 24, was the son of a South Welsh prince, who founded several monasteries in Glamorganshire and neighboring regions, but was driven away to Brittany by the coming of the Saxons. There he was walking one day with a copy of Virgil's poems in his hand and wept to think that Virgil as a pagan might be in hell. An ultra orthodox friend who was with him severely reproved him for even doubting the fact, and a sudden gust of wind carried the book out of Cadoc's hand into the sea. But that night he heard in a dream a sweet voice saying: "Pray for me; weary not in praying. I will sing the merces of the Lord forever." And next day a fisherman brought Cadoc a fish inside which the Virgil was found uninjured. —London Chronicle.

A Versatile Parish Clerk.
The ancient parish clerk in England had many functions. Letters were not so common in those days as today, and the clerk was the learned man of the community. One of his functions was writing epitaphs, but this was not the sum of his accomplishments, as may be seen from the advertisement of John Hopkins, clerk of Salisbury in the eighteenth century:
John Hopkins, parish clerk and undertaker, sells epitaphs of all sorts and prices. Shaves neat and plays the bassoon. Teeth drawn, and the Salisbury Journal read gratis every Sunday morning at 8. A school for psalmody every Thursday evening, when my son, born blind, will play on the fiddle. Specimens of my work:
My wife ten years not much to my ease,
But now she is dead in caelo quies.
Great variety to be seen within. Your humble servant,
JOHN HOPKINS.

The Australian Native.
For hundreds of years, perhaps thousands, the Australian black has accepted the doctrine of a Trinity in heaven and the theory of evolution. In some respects he is far superior to his civilized contemporary, but he curls himself around like a dog and slinks to sleep on the bare ground at sunset. In the dark he is a veritable coward.

What Happens.
In a written examination on physical geography one of the questions was: "What happens when there is an eclipse of the moon?"
A boy with rather an admirable knack of getting out of a difficulty wrote the following answer:
"A great many people come out to look at it." —London Answers.
In some South American tribes the women draw the front teeth, esteeming as an ornament the black gap thus made.
