In our last week's issue we published a communication relative to the candidacy of Judge R. C. Orr for district judge of this district. This communication was handed us just as the forms were ready for the press and hence we had no time or space for comment. While we fully endorse all the writer said about the judge and his candidacy, we feel that much more could be justly said commendatory of Judge Orr. For four years he has filled the exalted position of judge of the district court of this, the 14th Judicial District, and we venture to say that no judge in the state has given closer attention, more careful consideration, and more universal satisfaction to the business of his court to his litigants and the bar than has Judge Orr, and has maintained with more dignity, courtesy and learning of the law than has he. One of the most noticeable features of his regime as judge, is the very few cases decided by him which have been appealed to higher courts, and the very few cases that have been reversed, and especially so in cases where corporate interests have been arrayed against the people. That railroads, other corporate interests of state are opposing Judge Orr's renomination and will oppose his election is the best evidence to the people of his district that the peoples' interest is and will be safe in his hands and they should see to it, that he is again placed on the judicial bench of this district. His past record of four years as man and jurist, his keen legal perception, his rapid but careful manner in disposing of business before him, his kind, courteous manner to all who have business in his court, his stalwart and loyal republicanism, added to the farther fact that he has never been an office seeker, the position of judge which he now occupies being the only office ever sought by him in the state, with a residence here for twenty-one years, certainly points him out as the proper person to succeed himself on the bench in this judicial district. There is an unwritten law of all political parties which custom has made almost actual law, that when an officer has served his constituency well and faithfully he is entitled to a second term, and with the judiciary we believe that when the right man is found there should be no change from the established rule.—Imperial Republican.

The above from the Imperial Republican lays particular stress upon the statement that Judge Orr is entitled to another term because he has served one successfully. In a former article the Imperial Republican attempted to make good political medicine for the judge because of the judge's splendid record and because the judge is the people's candidate. THE TRIBUNE had to correct, in the interest of facts, both of these misstatements, and now it becomes our duty to correct the misstatement as to the matter of terms of office held. Judge Orr has had two terms as much as President Roosevelt has had two terms. One term by appointment to fill unexpired term of Judge Norris and one term by election. This fact of holding the office for two terms should be sufficient grounds for urging the election of another. The Imperial Republican has not yet cited facts warranting the people of this district to sidestep the established two-term rule. In fact none of the claims so far set forth by the Republican will stand scanning—the facts being invariably to the contrary. The Republican is guilty of using very old and very silly political methods of attempting to fool the people some of the time, if not all the time.

The primary system, which will have its first try-out with the people of Nebraska September 3rd, puts the matter of selecting candidates for all offices up to the people. How well they will discharge their great opportunity remains to be seen. THE TRIBUNE hopes they will rise up to the dignity and importance of the great occasion.

Carlyle on Webster.
Thomas Carlyle, who once met Daniel Webster at a friend's house at breakfast, said: "This American Webster I take to be one of the stiffest logic bluffers and parliamentary athletes anywhere to be met with in our world at present—a grim, tall, broad bottomed, yellow skinned man, with brows like precipitous cliffs and huge, black, dull, wearied, yet unwearied looking eyes under them; amorphous projecting nose and the angriest shut mouth I have anywhere seen. A droop on the sides of the upper lip is quite mastiff-like—magnificent to look upon, it is so quiet withal. I guess I should like ill to be that man's nigger. However, he is a right clever man in his way and has a husky sort of fun in him, too; draws in a handfast, didactic manner about 'our republican institutions,' etc., and so plays his part."

A Candidate for Re-nomination.
I am a candidate for re-nomination to the office of county sheriff, and seek the support of all voters in the republican party, feeling confident that my record as sheriff during the past two years warrants my ambition to be re-elected, and promising my best service if re-elected for another term. H. I. PETERSON.

I am a candidate for the office of sheriff of Red Willow county and seek the support and votes of the Republicans of the county, promising personal and best service if nominated and elected.

ALEXANDRIAN LIBRARY.

The Greatest Literary Treasure That the World Has Lost.
Perhaps the largest and most valuable of literary treasures the world has lost was the Alexandrian library. This collection, the most remarkable of the ancient world, is said to have contained in its most flourishing period 400,000, or, according to others, 700,000 manuscripts. Its royal founder collected from all nations their choicest compositions. We are told that one of his successors went so far as to refuse to supply the Athenians with wheat until they had given him the original manuscripts of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides. When Julius Caesar laid siege to the city the greater portion of this library was destroyed by fire. It was later replaced by the collection presented to Queen Cleopatra by Mark Antony. But it was not destined to endure long. When the Emperor Theodosius the Great in 391 A. D. ordered the destruction of all heathen temples within the Roman empire, the Christians, led by the Archbishop Theophilus, did not spare that of Jupiter, in which were kept the literary treasures. From this general destruction about 4,000 manuscripts escaped, only to be burned in 640 by Saracens under the Caliph Omar—Argonaut.
Marengo, the famous war charger of Napoleon, is said to have been the greatest horse known to modern history. The emperor rode Marengo for the last time in the battle of Mount St. Jean, where the horse received his seventh wound. The steed died at the age of thirty-six years.

"Fighting Bob," Fleet Commander

IN view of the present delicate situation in the relations between the United States and Japan the assignment of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans to command the fleet that is to cruise in the Pacific means a high compliment to that officer and an expression of much confidence in his discretion and ability. Admiral Evans has had more experience as a fleet commander than any other rear admiral on the active list. He is familiar with conditions in Pacific waters, as he was commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet for two years, a part of this service being during the period of the Russo-Japanese war.

"Fighting Bob" has earned his sobriquet. He was one of the heroes of the attacks on Fort Fisher in the civil war, receiving in that engagement four severe rifle shot wounds. He was in command of the Yorktown at Valparaiso, Chile, during the period of strained relations between that country and the United States, and it was his course at this critical time which gave him his title of "Fighting Bob." He helped vanquish Cervera's fleet at Santiago and has rendered exceptional service in his later career. Soon after his return from the far east in 1904 he was asked by President Roosevelt to take command of what was then the North Atlantic fleet, and which comprised but eight battleships. The reorganization of the naval forces on the Atlantic coast and the establishment of the Atlantic fleet placed sixteen battleships and a considerable force of other craft, large and small, under this admiral's command. The men of his ships have been hard at work in the practice of naval maneuvers, in athletics of various sorts, which have been specially encouraged by Admiral Evans, and in other activities pertinent to their calling, so that it is believed the general standard of the branch of the service under "Fighting Bob" was never so high as now.

Admiral Evans was born in 1847 and was not quite eighteen years old when the assault on Fort Fisher, in which he participated, took place in 1865. He has described the affair vividly in his book entitled "A Sailor's Log—Reminiscences of Forty Years of Naval Life," dwelling briefly and modestly on his own part in it. A portion of the story is as follows:

As we approached the remains of the stockade I was aware that one particular sharpshooter was shooting at me, and when we were a hundred yards away he hit me in the left leg, about three inches below the knee. The force of the blow was so great that I landed on my face in the sand. I got a silk handkerchief out of my pocket and, with the kind assist-

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a McCook Citizen Shows You The Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headache, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this McCook testimony.

George Fowler, retired farmer, living in the northwestern part of McCook, Neb., says: I suffered from kidney trouble for two or three years. The secretions from my kidneys were of a dark red, contained heavy sediment if allowed to stand and were much too frequent in action. Dizzy spells often attacked me and spots would float before my eyes. I was nervous, fretful and subject to severe headaches. These at times would last all day and all night and my head would feel as if it would burst. After using many remedies without satisfactory relief, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at McConnell's drug store. Within one week's time I felt the greatest improvement in my condition. I continued using them and was cured. I have had no return of any of the symptoms up to this time.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Say you saw it in THE TRIBUNE.
