A SHORT SPEECH.

Made by an Indian Chief In Reply to a Government Agent.

Old Shah-bah-Skong, the head chief of Mille Lac, brought all his warriors to defend Fort Ripley in 1862. The secretary of the interior and the governor and legislature of Minnesota promised these Indians that for this act of bravery they should have the special care of the government and never be removed.

A few years later a special agent was sent from Washington to ask the Ojibways to cede their lands and remove to a country north of Leech lake. The agent asked my help. I

"I know that country. I have camped on it. It is the most worthless strip of land in Minnesota. The Indians are not fools. Don't attempt this folly. You will surely come to grief."

He called the Indians in council and

"My red brothers, your great father has heard how you have been wronged. He said, 'I will send them an honest man.' He looked in the north, the south, the east and the west. When he saw me, he said, 'This is the honest man whom I will send to my red children.' Brothers, look at me! The winds of fifty-five years have blown over my head and silvered it with gray, and in all that time I have never done wrong to any man. As your friend I ask you to sign this treaty." Old Shah-bah-Skong sprang to his feet and said:

"My friend, look at me! The winds of more than fifty winters have blown over my head and silvered it with gray, but they have not blown my brains away."

That council was ended,

THE NECK RUFF.

It Reached Its Full Glory In the Sixteenth Century.

One of the most peculiar and interesting evolutions in historic fashion is the growth and development of the ruff in England. This ruff began its career as a humble little something like a tuck running along the top of the chemisette from shoulder to shoulder. You can see it grow in the portraits of royal personages slowly, but surely, like a great linen flower opening its plaited petals from generation to generation. During the reign of Henry VII. it was scarcely more C. W. Bronson Lodge No. 487, B. of R. T., than a budding excrescence, but with the ears and was beginning to sport a mild flare. Those were the days of such strict sumptuary laws that in order to wear black gemet you must be royal, to wear sable you must outrank your viscount neighbor, to wear marten or velvet trimmings you must be able to show an income of over 200 marks a year. The reign of Edward VI. and Queen Mary merely fostered the ruff without encouraging it to any greater development. But Queen Elizabeth, seeing in it possibilities for offsetting her red hair and clear skin, fanned it into vigorous life. In the sixteenth century the ruff burst into full bloom. Men and women, even tiny princesses, were overshadowed by the stiff rays of the ruff on all great occasions. Even over France, Germany and Italy it spread its white pinions and held unquestioned sway until it fell with the Roundheads.
