Call it whatever name you will. Canonism is simply the Steel Trust, the Money Trust, the Standard Oil, and all the other creatures of Privilege.

Whatever party name it carries—Republican, Democrat, Roundhead or Tory,—it is the age-old conflict of Dollars vs. Men; Property vs. Humanity; Privilege vs. Equal Opportunity.—Samuel M. Evans.

Last week upwards of twenty-five democratic newspapers in Nebraska bolted Dahlman and many more have indicated an intention of bolting him. It is now up to them to be sorely criticised for their action in certain quarters. Last week we got ours. It came from a pug nosed cur in McCook, whom we have long known, and whose enmity we consider an honor. His criticism was followed by that of Editor Pontius of Indianola, a man whose record at Indianapolis and Washington, Kansas smells to heaven, and whose wife is now suing him for divorce at Fairbury on grounds too indecent to publish in a newspaper, and who will verify our statements regarding him. At the town where he now resides, his paper is locally known as "The Carion." This is all immaterial to our readers, but we mention it to show what a newspaper man has to put up with when he arises to assert his independence. The most lasting impression we gained at our mother's knee was to stand for the things that go to make men nobler, and homes happier, and if there is a thing in the doctrines that Dahlman preaches that the reverse condition will not result from, we will admit then that we are no judge of decency or morals. The average country press stand for the moral development of the country, and that's why they can not support Jim Dahlman, the boozier.—Riverton Review.

Senator Burkett's Showing.

Now that the smoke of the primary battle is past, it is more than of passing interest to note the result:

The senator, for instance, carried every county in the state over his principal opponent, except four counties in the Fifth district, where the World-Herald and other papers and political enemies sought to make it appear that the senator was opposed to the renomination of Congressman Norris.

Senator Burkett had over 12,000 votes to the good over his chief opponent. When it is remembered that there were five candidates contesting this is a better showing than was made by any other candidate on the Republican ticket. This vote alone establishes the senator's standing with voters of the state.

His position in the estimation of the great leader of Republican progressives, Ex-President Roosevelt, was well voiced by the colonel in Omaha, last week, when he stated, "that Senator Burkett was one of the men on whom he specially relied."

The Republicans of Nebraska are now confronted with the alternative of returning to the United States senate, Elmer J. Burkett, a Republican so well endorsed by the Republicans of the state in the primary, and by Colonel Roosevelt, or of being represented by a Democrat in the person of the editor of the World-Herald. Seriously, there is no room for hesitancy on the part of any Republican. Senator Burkett will support President Taft in his efforts to push along the progressive policies of Col. Roosevelt. The Democratic candidate could do nothing else but support the policies of the party opposed to those of this administration and of administration of Former President Roosevelt.

The duty of Nebraska Republicans is clear and urgent.

During Ex-President Roosevelt's visit in Omaha, last week, he voiced an appreciation of Senator Burkett, which must be a source of large satisfaction to the senator and to his friends in Nebraska. Such an endorsement, coming from such a source, is of the highest worth. After being introduced by Senator Burkett, the former president stated in part:

"I am particularly pleased to be introduced by Senator Burkett because he was one of the men on whom I especially relied while I was president, both while he was in the house and in the senate. On one occasion he paid a tribute to me which may have been entirely unmerited, in which he described what the typical American public servant must be. He said: 'In the great struggle of life he (the good American) must be prepared to take the side of the man rather than of the dollar. Old time methods in politics, old time ideals of governmental duty and prerogative are relegated to the junk shop of political antiquities. No man who is skeptical in his own mind of the righteousness of the advanced ground that the American people have taken socially or morally can have their confidence. No man who is fearful of popular rule, or is more afraid of the people's oppression of predatory wealth with law than of its oppression of the people without law is eligible to popular esteem.'"

"In my own case," Colonel Roosevelt continued, "All I can say is that I have endeavored to live up to that description and that I was able to accomplish what I did accomplish in Washington only because of the way in which I was backed by men like Senator Burkett, and as we have a guest from Iowa present, let me say, also, like Senator Dolliver."

From the standpoint of the few, namely, the distillers, wholesale and retail dealers in liquors, and that other limited number of citizens who are benefited indirectly commercially, there might temporarily be some advantage in the election of Dahlman and the defeat of Aldrich and county option, but for the financial, moral and physical good of the many, the great mass of the producers and consumers of Nebraska, his success would be most deplorable,—a disgrace and calamity; announcing to the world, as it would, the humiliating fact that a majority of people of this state favor a man for its chief executive whose only distinction is the fact that he takes bold pride and blatant satisfaction in aiding and defending the liquor traffic, and that he does not enforce or respect the laws of the state or the ordinances of the city of which he is mayor against impurity, gambling etc. Let the issue be clearly drawn and met. The campaign in Nebraska, this fall, is not only a wet and dry issue, but a battle for law-enforcement, for common morality and decency. Let Nebraska take no backward step, this fall, by boosting into the governor's chair so unworthy a man as Dahlman. Let Nebraska advance and progress upward.

LaFollette carried Wisconsin 4 to 1 for U. S. senator. Francis E. McGovern, progressive candidate for governor, will have 20,000 majority.

The proposed Populist move to "draft" Governor Shallenberger into the gubernatorial contest can result in nothing more serious than complicating the now quite certain election of C. H. Aldrich.

Some eastern subsidized newspapers brand "Our Teddy" as a demagogue. If so, he is the sort of demagogue the fair, free and progressive west loves. May the gods multiply them freely and indefinitely.

Mrs. A. E. Petty and son returned to their Lincoln home, end of week. Lewis Rouse is now helper to Agent Reese at Imperial.

The First National Bank of Imperial opened for business, August 29th with a paid up capital of $25,000 and a $5,000 surplus fund, in a handsome new bank building.

The prominent position of Congressman G. W. Norris among the leaders in the Progressive Republican movement now sweeping the whole country, is no doubt a source of supreme satisfaction to his townspeople of McCook and to his friends and constituency of the 5th Nebraska district. It marks him as a national figure of prominence in a commanding and expanding movement, and the pride of the Republicans of his district will no doubt find adequate expression at the polls in November next in returning him to his post in the house of representatives by a complimentary majority. To do less at this time would be worse than ingratitude—it would be a political blunder. No man, Republican or Democrat, can at this time hope to be able to accomplish as much for Nebraska or the 5th district. His experience, his knowledge, his commanding place in the progressive movement are all simply invaluable at this crisis in political affairs. Every consideration from the viewpoint of Progressive Republicanism urges a staunch support of Congressman Norris for reelection.

Bamboo.
It is possible that the world's future supply of paper pulp will be derived from the bamboo forests of the tropics instead of being drawn from the forests of the temperate zones. Successful experiments have been made in Japan pointing in that direction. A company has obtained a perpetual lease of 8,000 acres of bamboo forest in Formosa, enough to provide 600 tons a month.

He Met It on the Road.

He didn't wait for prosperity to come. The very minute they told him it was on the road, he said: "Maybe the horses'll get stalled, and the driver all froze up; so I'll just meet it halfway, and help get the wheels out the mire, and give it a fresh start; then, when it looks like smooth sailing, I'll hop on, and take a seat by the driver, and we'll go whistling into town!"—Atlanta Constitution

Utilizing His Creditor.

"Seems to me little Juggins is cutting a wide swath for a man of small means. Has he struck oil recently?" asked Harkaway. "Oh, no," laughed Robinson. "He's a good manager. He makes a little creditor go a long ways."—Harper's Weekly.

Before the Crowned Heads.

"There is a rule that one must never turn one's back on royalty." "Then my manners are all right; whenever I meet four kings in a jackpot I always back out."

The New Automatic

Electric Washer and Wringer

It is as far ahead of its predecessor as the first automatic was in advance of its competitors. I now call your attention to a few prominent features of this machine:

THE REVERSIBLE WRINGER, whereby clothes becoming entangled in the rolls can be readily extracted. A simple movement of the small lever attached to the wringer frame will either start, stop or reverse the wringer at will.

THE LOCATION OF THE MOTOR and gearing in the center of a substantial platform beneath the tub provides the best possible protection from splashing or dipping water, and makes the neatest arrangement of machinery to be obtained. This is an exclusive advantage of the automatic electric washer, and patented. Call at my office and see the machine in operation or let me bring it to your home for a free trial.
