JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

THE recent announcement of the illness of James Whitcomb Riley suddenly recalled to the country the fact that this was our greatest—or, at least, our most popular—living poet. Mr. Riley had not been writing much of recent years and for that reason had somewhat dropped out of the news. Indeed, the stroke of paralysis from which he suffered antedated by some weeks the general announcement of it. Then the vast majority of readers learned with surprised regret that the poet had not been well for months. Any one knowing him, however, could understand that the lack of news concerning his illness doubtless arose from his own shy reticence regarding everything that concerned him personally and his habit of minimizing his own troubles.

The Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania is only forty-four years old, yet he has received his party's vote for United States senator. He has been floor leader of his party in the state senate, has been permanent chairman of a state convention, has been chief of the Knights of the Golden Eagle of his state, has been elected many times in a Republican stronghold and is one of the leading lawyers of Bucks county. In addition, he was for twelve years superintendent of a Sunday school and for more than twenty years church organist and leader of the choir. These are only the beginnings of the things Senator Grim has done. Among the remainder he has been member of a school board and justice of the peace. Yes, and he led his Odd Fellows' lodge when it captured a prize in Canada. To do all of these things we are assured that Senator Grim works till 12 o'clock at night when not at church or lodge. Furthermore, he is so jovial that the motto "Grim he is by name, but not by nature," is explained.

SENATOR WEBSTER GRIM.

Just now politicians the country over are wondering what George B. Cox, the Cincinnati boss, will do. Cox's candidate for governor, Judge Brown of Dayton, was turned down, and there were some who said that Cox only swung in line for Harding because he thought the nominee would be beaten at the polls. They overlooked the factor of gratitude, however, for Harding once made a most eloquent and eulogistic speech in nominating Cox for delegate at large to a national convention. The Cincinnati boss is not the sort of man to forget a thing like that, so it is a safe bet that he is supporting Harding in good faith. Cox is an ex-saloon keeper, ex-fighter, present banker and theatrical backer. When he was in his prime he stood six feet in height. He first became a force in politics because he could leap footed over his saloon counter and land on the jaw of a man on the other side on his way down. He never ran for office but once, and then he was beaten by the length of the Ohio river. But he has ruled Cincinnati and the politics of southern Ohio absolutely.

GEORGE B. COX.

They are still saying that "Loeb did it," and if any one asks, "What has Loeb done now?" the answer is: "Haven't you heard? Shaved off his mustache." Fact! If you don't believe it, look at the picture. This is William Loeb, Jr., up to date. The fell deed was done on a very hot day. When a smooth faced man, with classical features, wearing eyeglasses, entered the custom house the next morning the uniformed attendants in the outer office of the collector jumped to their feet and asked the seeming stranger what business he had within.

They told him the collector had not arrived yet for the day. "I am Collector Loeb," he said quietly and with a smile after some deliberation, weighing what he should say. He then entered the inner office, where he surprised two deputies and a secretary. When Collector Loeb was asked why he had shaved off his mustache he replied, after a little thought, that he did it because it was hot and he wanted to be cooler.

MRS. KATE RICHARDS O'HARA.

FOR a woman while at the wash-tub to receive a notification that she had just been nominated for congress and then for her to dry her arms and start out to make fifty speeches in the district indicates that we are either going back to old fashioned things or going forward to very new fashioned things. Considering that this woman, Mrs. Kate O'Hara, lives in Kansas and has been nominated by the Socialists inclines one to the new fashioned interpretation. The false notion must not be gained that Mrs. O'Hara takes in washing for a living. She was simply doing her own family wash as the fateful summons came. When Rome called Cicinnatus he left his plow in the furrow. It is not probable that Mrs. O'Hara left her clothes in the suds, however. She is too careful a housewife for that. Nor is it even likely that she will leave her opponents in the suds at the end of the campaign. The Socialist party is not strong enough to do things of that sort. However that may be, the people of her district and elsewhere will admire Mrs. O'Hara's pluck, even though they do not elect her to congress.

The world of music will be delighted to hear that Lina Cavalleri has come successfully through a recent operation for appendicitis performed in Paris. The disease had become chronic, and complications were feared, but assurance is now given that the famous singer will suffer no ill effects. A romantic interest is lent to the case because of the fact that Mlle. Cavalleri is a new bride and off the stage is known as Mrs. Robert Winthrop Chanler. Mr. Chanler is the "Brother Bob" famous in New York state and elsewhere. He it was who looked after his brother Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler's candidacy for the governorship of New York two years ago. "Brother Bob" has also been sheriff of Dutchess county, N. Y., member of assembly and amateur artist of note. Perhaps his most famous picture is of a number of very tall giraffes eating golden oranges growing on silver birch trees.

MRS. ROBERT W. CHANLER.

The congressional campaign does not attract quite the popular interest that attends the election of a president, yet the fight in off years sometimes determines the result in the succeeding presidential canvass. The present battle to control congress will not be without its influence in 1912. The campaign manager on the Republican side has the name of the martyr president and a middle name thrown in. William Brown McKinley is a minister's son, started life as a drug clerk and is now the head of large street railway interests that make him a millionaire. He was formerly treasurer of the Republican congressional committee and succeeded Vice President Sherman as chairman. He can make a speech, but prefers to leave that to others. He is known chiefly as a harmonizer and organizer. It has been said of McKinley that he is the most popular man in congress. Yet he is seldom heard on the floor. Possibly that is the reason for his popularity.

The Democratic congressional chairman, James Tighman Lloyd, has represented the First Missouri district since 1893. He is a quiet, self contained man who gives the impression of reserved power. Lloyd makes no more noise on the floor than McKinley, but when it comes to claiming the next congress he can talk right out loud so the whole country can hear it. Last winter he refused to be a member of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, for which the Republican caucus named him in place of Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, and gave as his reason that it would interfere with his work in organizing the congressional campaign. Both the Democratic and Republican chairmen have their headquarters in Chicago, but spend most of the time on the warpath and in the field. Lloyd really believes he will win this fight.

Belleuve College

begins its 27th year this week with fine prospects. A largely increased attendance is assured. The faculty in the main remains as last year. Dr. Chas. K. Hoyt, Dean Robert S. Calder and Prof. Oscar Schmiedel, highly valued members of the faculty, have declined positions in other institutions to remain here. Dr. Geo. Hamilton, son of the well known American painter of that name, and a graduate of Oxford university, has accepted the chair of Latin. Prof. William Nicholl, an alumnus of the college and a graduate of Princeton university, with graduate work in Edingburgh university, comes from Hastings college to take the chair of education in his alma mater. Bert McCoy, captain of the Drake university foot ball team of '08, and member of the All-Iowa team for that year, is on the ground as director of athletics. The trustees have approved the new department of domestic economy, to the headship of which Miss Helen Pierce of the University of Wisconsin has been called.

Order of Hearing.

The state of Nebraska, Red Willow county, ss. In the county court. Whereas, on this tenth day of September, 1910, Gertie Bortner, mother of Francis Ora Wray, made and filed in this office her sworn statement, duly attested, and stated that she desired to relinquish all right to the custody of and power and control over Francis Ora Wray, her minor child, and all claim and interest in and to his services and wages; and also came Daniel B. Doyle and Emma Doyle and made and filed in my office a statement under oath, duly attested, that they desired to adopt said Francis Ora Wray as their own child. I have therefore appointed the 20th day of October, 1910 at ten o'clock a. m., at my office in McCook, Nebraska, as the time and place where a hearing will be had in said matter at which time and place all persons interested may appear.

It is ordered that a copy of this order be published in the McCook Tribune, a newspaper of general circulation, published in Red Willow county, for four successive weeks prior to the time set for hearing. (Seal)

The Texas Exhibit.

Among the most interesting exhibits at the state fair this year is that of the Valley Fruit Farm and Garden Co. of this city. During the past year this company has sold twenty thousand acres of land adjoining Francetas, Tex., a new town they are establishing, to Nebraska people and they brought the exhibit to the fair to show their customers the products of the land, as a large number of purchasers expect soon to make their permanent homes there. This section of Texas grows, as shown in the exhibit, oranges, figs, pears, apples, peaches, cranberries, tobacco, cotton, Japanese persimmons, peanuts, rice, and in fact most every thing that is produced from soil.

Some of the more interesting things to Nebraskans are a four-year-old orange tree full of half grown oranges, a kumquat tree filled with fruit, a fig tree ready for the harvest, and cotton as it grows in the field.

In addition to the novelties named, the exhibit contains such staples as sugar cane, kaffir corn, broom corn, potatoes, sweet potatoes, melons and all kinds of garden produce, quality of the gulf coast lands.

There are also many views of scene presented which bespeak the character of the land and its fine home-making capacities, and although that is not generally looked upon by Nebraskans as a corn-growing country, this exhibit contains specimens of as fine corn as can be grown anywhere, taken from the lands of this company. This entire exhibit was collected upon two days' notice, but it is of a character to attract much attention and admiration.

It is almost impossible to believe that this exhibit can display field corn of superior quality, raised on the gulf coast, and yielding ninety bushels to the acre, but that is just what the attendants at the booths are prepared to show. Nebraskans who are interested in agricultural pursuits will find much to interest them in this exhibit.—Lincoln Journal.
