MURDERER WITH MANY LIVES.

Four Times Sentenced to Death He Escape on Techicalities.

Salt Lake City dispatch: Five years ago last July, John F. Turner, a young man just starting out in life for himself, was murdered in camp at Park City, and the two teams taken by Fred Hopt, alias Welcome, and one Emerson, driven into Wyoming and sold. They covered the body of Turner with sacks of grain in one of the wagons, and hauled it to a spot thirty miles from the scene of the murder, where they hid it, and where it was found ten days afterwards. Hopt was arrested at Cheyenne, 500 miles fro n where the murder was committed. He resisted arrest, while Emerson sent for the officers to come and get him at Carbon, Wyo. Emerson was tried twice and sent to the penitentiary for life. Hopt asked for a continuance of his case, but this was denied. He was tried and sentenced to be shot, but secured a new trial through an appeal to the supreme court of the United States, on the ground of error in not being granted a continuance when entitled to it. This appeal took one year to reach a decision, after which he was tried, condemned to be hanged, and again secured a new trial on technical grounds. The third trial resu:ted in a conviction and sentence to be shot. His attorneys asked for a new trial. In June, 1884, within a half hour of the time limited for his execution, the acting governor came to his rescue, amidst an excited populace, and granted a stay of execution pending an appeal. It took one year to reach a decision by the supreme court, which granted a new trial. This transpired two weeks ago, and last week he was sentenced to death the fourth time, the prisoner choosing to be shot as the proverbial mode of execution. Again have his attorneys applied for a new trial. Their appeal goes first to the supreme court of the territory, which meets in January, and then it can be carried to the supreme court of the United States, as has thrice been done already. A remarkable feature in this celebrated case is the fact that the man has no money or friends who have money to spend in his behalf. He has had attorneys assigned to his defense by the court who have had no pay for their services, and who have been compelled to advance fees out of their own pocket; and yet, through technicalities, and taking advantage of the laws of appeal applicable to Utah, they have already kept their client from execution for five years, and it will probably take another year to end the case, unless the populace execute vengeance, as they have attempted to do several time, during the trials.

HE MUST PAY THE PENALTY.

In Ludlow Street Jall Seven Years for Bebt.

Judge O'Gorman in the superior court of New York, heard a motion in the interest of A. R. MeDonald, an English subject, who has been confined in Ludlow street jail seven years for debt. Mr. Mac-Donald through his counsel, desires to know whether he is to be confined all his life. He accumulated a fortune in the south and when the war broke out he was worth $2,000,000, which was invested in cotclaim was considered valueless and was bid in by Mr. McDonald for $30. In 1871, however, McDonald was awarded $207,000 by the government. He refused to pay his lawyers and they obtained an order of court commanding him to pay them $50,000. McDonald was arrested, charged with converting his lawyers' money to his own use. He was locked up at the Ludlow street jail, and has been there ever since. His counsel argued that he had been sufficiently punished for his neglect of the court's order, which amounted only to "laches," and he should be released and allowed to defend himself in the original proceedings brought against him by his lawyers.

Counsel on the other side argued that Mac-Donald having refused to take advantage of the "poor debtor's" law, acquiesced in the decision of the court. He therefore could not be released except on purging himself of contempt by paying over money. Judge O'Gorman reserved his decision. It is claimed in behalf of MacDonald that when he swore in the bankruptcy proceedings that his cotton claim was worthless, it really was so, and only became valuable after the appointment of the southern claims commission in 1871.

MATTERS OF NATIONAL IMPORT. As Set Forth in the Report of the Secretary of the Interior. In his first annual report to the secretary of the interior upon the operations of the labor bureau since its establishment, Commissioner Carroll D. Wright begins with & statement of the organization of the bureast and a review of the line of policy outlined for the conduct of its investigation. The principal features of that policy were the refusal to recognize parties; that the bureau should be disconnected with politics and from a dependence on organizations, whether of workingmen or employers, and from the support of economic theories, iadividual views or class interests. The commissioner believes that this policy generally has been approved throughout the country. The investigations outlined related to the questions of industrial depression involving a study of their character, their causes and whether, as to duration, severity and periodically, they are all alike in the great producing countries. Such investigation included the question of the influence of the depression on the cost of living, the extent to which industries are involved, cost of production as influenced by the use of machinery and other kindred questions. Between March 17th and June 27th, twenty special agents were appointed, and at the close of the fiscal year fifteen of these agents were actively employed in the United States and five in Europe collecting the information required. The results of the investigation will be embodied in the first annual report of the bureau, which will be submitted early the coming year. The appropriation for the expenses of the bureau for the year ended June 30, 1885, were ample for its expenses and nearly $9,-000 were covered into the treasury. Conclusion the commissioner says that the appropriation for the present fiscal year will, in his judgment, suffice for the first full year's work of the bureau.

No Mystery About It.

There are no mysteries or secrets about the compounding of Brown's Iron Bitters. The preparation of iron is the only one that can be taken without injuring the teeth or stomach. It gives vigor to the feeble, life to the debilitated, and health to the dyspeptic. You need not fear to give it to the most delicate child. Mrs. Emma Williams, of Starkweather, Miss., says: "It relieved my daughter of dyspepsia, and my-self of general debility."

"A certificate from Parson Jordan, of Galveston?" said the merchant.

"Yes, sir; here it is," replied the mendicant, handing the merchant a paper. The merchant looked at the paper and said:

"Parson Jordan, of Galveston, is my brother. I know his signature very well, and his signature on that certificate is forged."

"Just as I expected," whined the mendicant. "I told you I was the most unfortunate man in the world. Just think of me coming to the brother of Parson Jordan, of all the people in the town, and showing him that forged certificate, when there is not another man in Austin who knows his signature."-- [Texas Siftings.
