SOFT words may turn away wrath, but they won't better a parsnip.

The railroads announce a two cent rate for "barn stormers." Editors will walk as usual.

THERE are worse things in this world than small pox. The common, every-day street loafer is one of them.—Topics.

THE Supreme Court of Kansas has decided that when a woman marries she need not take her husband's name unless she choose.

THE Gazette-Journal seems to be in some doubt as to whether Hastings is slumbering or not, and in the agony of its pent up doubt inquires, "Is Hastings asleep?" Pinch her and see.

AN exchange solves the labor problem in these terse words: "The only way to abolish poverty is to dig for yourself, or to get some one to dig for you whose work is worth more than his wages."

MRS. GRANT has just received from the publisher a check for $33,384.53 as additional profits on the sale of "General Grant's Memoirs." She has thus received to date a total of $394,459.53. The financial success of Gen. Grant's book is unprecedented in the history of literature.

THE Holdrege Democrat is defunct. A chattel mortgage and an editor inclined to over pungent paragraphing were too strong a combination for its tender build. Friend King makes a raucy rustler in the journalistic harness, but lacks judgment. Rushing in where angels fear to tread, he has reaped a fool's reward.

THE bucolic press of the Republican Valley properly objects to unjust discrimination as against them and in favor of the more pretentious daily press of the larger cities of Nebraska. We hope the boys will soon arise into the full, manly dignity of the profession. They will then command and demand consideration.

COLONEL YULE, in his Anglo-Indian Glossary, says that "Don't care a damn" comes from the Hindostan. In that country the "damri" was originally a copper coin of very small denomination. Damri became the common expression for the infinitesimal in coin and a Briton in India often says, "I won't give a damri" without understanding what a damri means.

THE New Orleans Times-Democrat makes the following observation apropos of the phenomenal building activity of the time: "There is now little doubt that 1887 will be the biggest building year that this country has ever known in railroads, factories and other houses. It is now estimated that 21,000 miles of new and 19,000 miles of old railway track will be laid this year—thus affording the iron furnaces and steel rolling and rail mills an abundance of work. The cost of these railroads is estimated at $333,000,000 for the new and $100,000,000 for the old roads—or say $650,000,000 of capital needed for the railroads alone."

The consumption of distilled spirits in the United States has increased from 40,000,000 gallons in 1840 to 72,000,000 gallons in 1886. In the interval the consumption of wine has run up from 448,000 gallons to 22,000,000 gallons, and that of malt liquors from 28,000,000 gallons to 642,000,000.

Everybody in the country, therefore, male and female, child and man, drinks ten gallons of stuff a year; the Germans drink about twenty-five gallons, the English over thirty-four gallons, and the French about thirty-eight gallons.

The printing press has made presidents, killed poets, furnished bustles for beauties and polished genius with criticism. It has made worlds get up at roll-call every morning, given the pulp lungs of iron and a voice of steam. It has set the price of a bushel of wheat, and made the country postoffice the glimmering goal of the rural scribe. It has curtailed the power of kings, graced the pantry shelves and bursted; it has converted bankers into paupers and made lawyers of college presidents; it has educated the homeless and robbed the philosopher of his reason. It smiles and kicks and cries and dies, but it can't be run to suit everybody, and the editor is a fool who tries. So says a contemporary.
