OKLAHOMA is dropping out of the telegrams and away from public notice save as General Merritt and the Kansas City papers, which started the boom, are busy denying reports of lawlessness and murder. Certainly not as much as was expected has been reported, but it is equally as certain that much has occurred that has never found its way into print.

A CANADIAN parliamentary orator is so incensed at the claim of the United States to the fisheries of Behring's sea that he threatened in a speech the other day to put a little gun boat of the Alutian island to settle the controversy for good. He told his audience that after the appearance of a Canadian gunboat in those seas we should hear no more of the fisheries claim.

STRANGE as it may seem New Hampshire is credited with having the largest divorce rate of any state, not excepting Illinois. During the year 1887 there was one divorce to every ten marriages. The number of marriages for that period was three thousand four hundred and ninety. With such a record the Granite State occupies a position in the country unique as it is undesirable.

DAKOTA is setting her cap to attract a large immigration this year. The promise of statehood and the prospects of the early opening of the Sioux reservation are powerful influences in directing the attention of home-seekers. The railroads, moreover, still have large areas of desirable lands to dispose of, and this combination of circumstances can not fail to be to the advantage of Dakota.

EUROPEAN cities have a way of bringing strikes to a close that may well be adopted when the occasion warrants. The recent street car strike at Vienna was terminated by the municipal authorities deciding that the street railway company should forfeit its twenty-five thousand dollar security and pay five thousand dollars penalty daily until travel was resumed. As might have been expected the company restored the strikers to their old positions, and the lines began running immediately. Further comment is unnecessary.

VANDERBILT'S roads are joining the Canadian lines in withdrawing freight trains on Sunday. The intention is to stop the freight business almost entirely on the Sabbath so as to give the employes one day's rest out of seven. It is a good thing and ought to be made the universal rule on the railroads of the country. The wear and tear of nerves that the railroad employes suffers from being obliged to work seven days in the week doubtless results in accidents enough to counterbalance the profit that accrues from the Sunday business.

It has been discovered that the disastrous railroad accident at Hamilton, Ontario, which resulted in the destruction of seventeen lives, was due to a defective axle in the locomotive. In other words, the terrible casualty might have been averted by the exercise of proper care in the inspection of the rolling stock of the train. It is one of the dangerous features of American railroad travel that the defects in the equipment of the great carrying thoroughfares are mostly discovered after it is too late to render the knowledge of any service in the way of protecting the public. The loss of human life in this country on the common lines of transit is simply appalling, and is alarmingly out of proportion to that which occurs in the old world.

DEMOCRATIC papers complain that President Harrison is laying his wares for a second term in the White house, because of his careful and conservative course in making official appointments. Well, what of it? A second term depends, outside of the president's no, on a successful administration. A successful and judicious administration is what the people want and what President Harrison was elected to give the people, and if his administrations is a success the second term follows almost as surely as the day the night. No one would want President Harrison to give the country a poor administration simply to shut the mouths of these chronic kickers. The president is hardly foolish enough to repeat Grover Cleveland's mistake of "working" the politicians for a second term. Cleveland had the politicians all right, but the people repudiated both.

THERE seems to be considerable misunderstanding among people regarding the admission of the new states, as they are called, North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington. The act providing for the admission of these territories was approved February 22 last, and many persons take it for granted that they are already states. Something remains to be done, however. In each of the four territories a constitution is to be submitted to the people at an election to be held on the first Tuesday in next October. If the constitution is approved by a majority of the voters, and the provisions of the act of admission complied with, the president will issue a proclamation announcing the result, and the territory will be in the union, on an equal footing with the other states. It is probable, therefore, that the proposed four states will be in soon after the first Tuesday of next October.
