JENNIE BAXTER: JOURNALIST

BY ROBERT BARR

-An Unlooked For Encounter.

At 9 o'clock the long train came to a standstill, 17 minutes late, at Luga, and ample time was allowed for a leisurely breakfast in the buffet of the station. Jennie found a small table and sat down beside it, ordering coffee and rolls from the waiter who came to serve her. Looking round at the cosmopolitan com-SHAVE or BATH Looking round at the cosmopolitan company and listening to the many languages whose clash gave a babel air to the restaurant, Jennie fell to musing on the strange experiences she had encountered since leaving London. It seemed to her she had been taking part in some ghastly nightmare, and she shuddered as she thought of the lawlessness, under cover of law, of this great and despotic empire, where even the ruler was under the surveillance of his subordinates, and could not get a letter out of his own dominion in safety were he so minded. "Ab, lost princess!"

She placed her hand suddenly to her throat, for the catch in her breath seemed to be suffocating her, then looked up and saw Lord Donal Stirling, in the orgentleman, as well groomed as if he had | said.' come, not from a train, but from his own house. There was a kindly smile on his lips and a sparkle in his eyes, but his face was of ghastly pallor.

"Oh, Lord Donal!" she cried, regarding him with eyes of wonder and fear. "What is wrong with you?"

"Nothing," the young man replied with an attempt at a laugh, "nothing. now that I have found you, princess. I have been making a night of it, that's all, and am suffering the consequences in the morning. May I sit down?" He dropped into a chair on the other side of the table and went on. "Like all dissipated men, I am going to breakfast on stimulants. Waiter,' he said, "bring me a large glass of your best brandy.

"And, waiter," interjected Jennie in French, "bring two breakfasts. I suppose it was not your breakfast that you ordered just now, Lord Donal?"
"I have ordered my breakfast," he said. "Still, it pleads in my favor that I do not carry brandy with me, as I ought to do, and so must drink the vile stuff they call their best here.' "You should eat as well," she insist-every right to do so. . "All shall be as you say, now that I have found you, but don't be surprised if I have but little appetite."

"What is the matter?" she asked breathlessly. "You certainly look very

"I have been drugged and robbed," he replied, lowering his voice. "I imagine I came to close quarters with

"Ah, lost princess!" death itself. I have spent a night in hades and this morning am barely able to stagger, but the sight of you, princess- Ah, well, I feel once more that I belong to the land of the living! "Please do not call me princess," said the girl, looking down at the table-"Then what am I to call you, prinсевя ?

"My name is Jennie Baxter," she said in a low voice.

"Miss Jennie Baxter?" he asked eagerly, with emphasis on the first word. "Miss Jennie Baxter," she answered, still not looking up at him.

He leaned back in his chair and said: "Well, this is not such a bad world, after all. To think of meeting you here in Russia! Have you been in St. Petersburg, then ?" "Yes. I am a newspaper woman," explained Jennie hurriedly. "When you met me before, I was there surreptitiously, fraudulently, if you like. I was there to-to write a report of it for my paper. I can never thank you enough, Lord Donal, for your kindness to me that evening. "Your thanks are belated," said the young man, with a visible attempt at gayety. "You should have written and acknowledged the kindness you are good enough to say I rendered to you. You knew my address and etiquette demanded that you should make your acknowledgments.

"I was reluctant to write," said Jennie, a smile hovering round her lips, 'fearing my letter might act as a clew. I had no wish to interfere with the legitimate business of Mr. Cadbury Tay-

"Great heavens!" cried the young man. "How came you to know about that? But of course the Princess von Steinheimer told you of it. She wrote to me charging me with all sorts of wickednesses for endeavoring to find

"No. Lord Donal, I did not learn it

from her. In fact, if you had opened the door of the inner room at Mr. Cadbury Taylor's a little quicker, you would have come upon me, for I was the assistant who tried to persuade him that you really met the Princess von Steinheimer. Lord Donal for the first time laughed heartily.

"Well, if that doesn't beat all! And I suppose Cadbury Taylor hasn't the slightest suspicion that you are the person he was looking for?' "No, not the slightest."

"I say, that is the best joke I have heard in ten years," said Lord Donal. and here, breakfast arriving, Jennie gave him his directions.

"You are to drink a small portion of that brandy," she said, "and then put the rest in your coffee. You must eat a good breakfast, and that will help you to forget your troubles-that is, if you have any real troubles."

"Oh, my troubles are real enough!" said the young man. "When I met you before, princess, I was reasonably successful. We even talked about embassadorships, didn't we, in spite of the fact that embassadors were making them selves unnecessarily obtrusive that night? Now you see before you a ruined man. No; I am not joking. It is true. I was given a commission, or, rather, knowing the danger there was in it, I begged that the commission might be given me. It was merely to take a letter from St. Petersburg to London. I have dinary everyday dress of an English failed, and when that is said all is

"But surely," said the girl, "you could not be expected to ward off such lawless robbery as you have been the victim of?"

"That is just what I expected and what I supposed I could ward off. In my profession, which, after all, has a great similarity to yours, except that I think we have to do more lying in ours, there must be no such word as fail. The very best excuses are listened to with tolerance, perhaps, and a shrug of the shoulders, but failure, no matter from what cause, is fell doom. I have failed. I shall not make any excuses. I will go to London and say merely, 'The Russian police have robbed me.' Oh, I know perfectly who did the trick and how it was done. Then I shall send in my resignation. They will accept it, with polite words of regret, and will say to each other: 'Poor fellow! He had a brilliant career before him, but he got drunk, or something, and fell in the protection he is alleged to have travditch.' Ah, well, we won't talk any more about it!"

"Then you don't despise the newspaper profession, Lord Donal?"

"Despise 1.1 Bless you, no! I look up ed, taking charge of him, as if she had to it, belong'ng myself to a profession very much lower down in the scale of morality, as I have said. But, princess," he added, leaning toward her, will you resign from the newspaper if I resign from diplomacy?" The girl slowly shook her head, her eyes on the tablecloth before her. "I will telegraph my resignation." he said impetuously, "if you will telegraph yours to your paper."

"You are feeling ill and worried this morning, Lord Donal, and so you take a pessimistic view of life. You must not resign."

that is enough." "It isn't enough. You must do noth ing until you reach London.'

"I like your word must, Jennie," said the young man audaciously. implies something, you know.

"What does it imply, Lord Donal?" she asked, glancing up at him. "It implies that you are going to leave the 'Lord' off my name.' "That wouldn't be very difficult," replied Jennie.

"I am delighted to hear you say so," exclaimed his lordship, "and, now that I may know how it sounds from your dear lips, call me Don."

"No; if I ever consented to omit the title, I should call you Donal. I like the name in its entirety.'

He reached his hand across the table. "Are you willing, then, to accept a man at the very lowest ebb of his fortunes? I know that if I were of the mold that heroes are made of I would hesitate to proffer you a blighted life. But I loved you the moment I saw you, and, remembering my fruitless search you again. I have not the courage." She placed her hand in his and looked him for the first time squarely in the

"Are you sure, Donal," she said, 'that I am not a mere effigy on which you are hanging the wornout garments of a past affection? You thought I was the princess at first."

"No I didn't," he protested. "As scon as I heard you speak I knew you were the one I was destined to meet. "Ah, Donal, Donal, at lover's perjuries they say Jove laughs! I don't dare not refuse you." "What an unholy spot for a proposal," he whispered, "and yet they call Russia the Great Lone Land. Oh, that we had a portion of it entirely to ourselves.

The girl sat there, a smile on her pretty lips that Lord Donal thought most tantalizing. A railway official announced in a loud voice that the train was about to resume its journey. There was a general shuffling of feet as the passengers rose to take their places. "Brothers and sieters kiss each other, you know, on the eve of a railway journey," said Lord Donal, taking advantage of the confusion. Jennie Baxter made no protest.

"There is plenty of time," he whispered. "I know the leisurely nature of Russian trains. Now I am going to the telegraph office to send in my resignation, and I want you to come with me and send in yours.

"No. Lord Donal," said the girl. "Aren't you going to resign?" he asked in surprise. "Yes, all in good time; but you are

GROFULA

The Blighting Disease of

crofula and Consumption are alike; they develop from the same general causes, both are hereditary and dependent upon an impure and impovished blood supply. In consumption the disease fastens itself upon the lungs; in Scrofula the glands of the neck and throat swell and suppurate, causing ugly running sores the eyes are inflamed and weak; there is an almost continual discharge from the ears, the limbs swell, bones ache, and white swelling is frequently a result, causing the diseased bones to work out through the skin, producing indescribable pain and suffering. Cutting away a sore or diseased gland does no good; the blood is poisoned. The old scrofulous taint which has probably come down through several generations has polluted every drop of blood.

Scrofula requires vigorous, persistent treatment. The blood must be brought back to a healthy condition before the terrible disease can be stopped in its work of destruction. Mercury, potash and other poisonous minerals usually given in such cases do more harm than good; they ruin the digestion and leave the system in a worse condition than before.

S. S. S. is the only medicine that can reach deep-sected blood troubles like Scrofula. It goes down to the very roots of the disease and forces every vestige of poison out of the blood. S. S. S. is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known. The roots and herbs from which it is made contain wonderful blood purifying properties, which no poison, however powerful, can long resist. S. S. S. stigntlineates and purifies the blood, increases the

If you have reason to think you have Scrofula, or your child has inherited any blood taint, don't wait for it to develop, but begin at once the use of S. S. S. It is a fine tonic and the best blood purifier and blood builder known, as it contains no poisonous minerals. S. S. S. is pre-eminently a remedy for

When my daughter was an infant she had a severe case of Scrofula, for which she was under the constant care of physicians for more than two years. She was worse at the end of that time, however, and we almost despaired of her life. A few bottles of Swift's Specific cured her completely, as it seemed to go direct to the cause of the trouble. I do not believe it has an equal for stubborn cases of blood diseases which are beyond the power of other so-called blood remedies.

"Oh, I say," he cried, "it is really imperative! I'll tell you all about it when we get on the train."

"It is really imperative that you should not send in your resignation. Indeed, Donal, you need not look at me with that surprised air. You may as well get accustomed to dictation at once. You did it yourself, you know. You can't say that I encouraged you. I eluded the vigilant Cadbury Taylor as long as I could. But, if there is time, go to the telegraph office and send a message to the real princess, Palace Steinheimer, Vienna. Say you are engaged to be married to Jennie Baxter and ask her to telegraph you at Ber-

"I'll do it," replied the young man. (To be continued next Friday.)
