JOHN S. BISHOP.

It is safe to assume that Porfiro Diaz will not endeavor to "come back."

Will Maupin's Weekly will oppose for re-election any Nebraska congressman or senator who fails to vote for free wool.

Senator Cummins of Iowa has just discovered that the problem of problems is that of distribution. The senator seems to be catching up.

Justice Harlan's dissenting opinion is all that keeps us from holding quite a bit of contempt for the supreme court's decision in the Standard Oil case.

Before Mr. Taft's friends wear themselves out looking for a running mate for him, they would better wait a bit and see whether Mr. Taft will deem it advisable to run.

Will Maupin's Weekly is for reciprocity as a steppingstone to the real thing—absolute and unconditional free trade. It is opposed to raising revenue by taxing enterprise and consumption.

The "grandfather clause" of the Oklahoma constitution, disfranchising negroes, has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of the United States. Oklahoma democrats enacted that law hoping to make Oklahoma solidly democratic forever. It came almighty near making Oklahoma a republican state, for it relieved a lot of voters of the fear of negro domination.

Either Mr. Wells of Omaha should be suppressed or the necessity for such a scheme as Wells advocates removed.

A trust that does not "unduly restrict" competition is all right. The trust is left to decide what is "unduly restrictive."

Governor Wilson is not seeking a presidential nomination, but he is not taking down any lightning rods erected over him by admiring friends.

Acquitting a drink-crazed man for indiscriminately shooting in a crowded court room is enforcing the "unwritten law" a bit too strenuously.

The only funny thing about the "comic supplements" of the Sunday newspapers is the fact that they are called "comic."

A lion escaped while Omaha Shriners were conducting an initiation. No damage was sustained. After the initiation the "tiger" wounded a few.

We'll bet a half-dollar that "Bet a Million" Gates will be presented with a certificate of membership in the Ananias Club just as soon as Roosevelt can find his fountain pen.

There are those still living who remember the whig slogan of 1856: "Free speech, free press, free soil and Fremont!" "Free wool" should be the slogan of every consumer in 1911.

We are told that before retiring President Diaz took an agent of Madero into the government treasury vaults and showed him $60,000,000 worth of gold. What was the matter with it—bars too heavy to be carried away?

Let's see, the law prohibits ball playing on Memorial Day, but we note that some gentlemen of the Lincoln Country Club joyfully played golf for a trophy. But not all of us are able to get into the social swim.

Mr. Roosevelt has been cited to appear and tell what he knows about that Tennessee Coal and Iron case. It will not take him long. But if he explains in detail how he was "worked out a finish" by the smooth guys who engineered that deal he will be on the stand for a week.

Some of these days Nebraska will have a legislature willing to spend enough money to care for the real needs of the state and unwilling to make a record for "economy" by starving state wards, neglecting state property and refusing to pay decent salaries to public officials. Some of these days, we say; but being well along towards middle age we scarcely expect to live to see it. The era of "peanut politics" is not over in Nebraska.
