

OLE MIS' MOON WITH THEM.
No Chance of the Visitors Being Homesick in the City.

Mme. Fairfax was wont to stand on the porch of her old Virginia home and rejoice on moonlight nights in the beauty, says the Youth's Companion. "There's my moon," she would say, as it rose from behind the eastern hills. "Look, Dahlia, see how beautiful it is," and her tiny colored maid, who was ever at hand with shawl or fan for her beloved mistress, would answer, enthusiastically: "Your moon certainly do look pow'ful handsome to-night."

When Mme. Fairfax journeyed to the city to visit her son, Dahlia, looking out of the window with wondering eyes on the first evening of her life away from home, exclaimed, in a voice of mingled astonishment and relief: "Well, I declar' to goodness, if ole Mis' Moon ain't done come along to Washington wif me an ole mis'! We can't be homesick nohow, wif ole Mis' Moon shining on us."

Training of Royal Children.
Most of the royal children of Europe are brought up much more simply than American children of the wealthier classes because they have none of the party engagements and school affiliations that take up so much of the time of American children. The Russian children are brought up according to the English customs, living much of the time in the open air, and are said to be a strong, jolly lot of youngsters, the small boy who is the crown prince imperial being an especially precocious youngster.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Tenace Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

It isn't a secret if a woman hesitates in the telling of it.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:
"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured."
"Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.
For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?
Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

KING OF PORTUGAL

YOUNG MONARCH TRIES TO LEARN WISHES OF HIS PEOPLE.

Is a Close Student of the Newspapers—Presence of Mind and Courage Not the Least of His Virtues.

London.—If young King Manuel continues as he has begun, the stability of the Portuguese monarchy should be assured for some time to come.

It is an undoubted fact that the unskillful policy and retrograde measures taken during the dictatorship had aroused widespread irritation and produced a considerable increase in republican ideas in the most cultivated centers of his country, especially Lisbon and Oporto. On the other hand, however, the extreme youth of the new king, the terrible misfortune which has fallen on him, the excellent intentions manifested by him since the very first days of his reign, have attracted toward him the good will and sympathies of his people, without exceptions of class or opinion. The results of the recent elections tend to prove that the present liberal and tolerant monarchy has regained the strength and prestige which it had unfortunately lost during the last reign through the errors and imprudence of many successive ministries.

Don Manuel is a bright, good-looking lad, his graceful manners and brilliance of repartee making him a great acquisition to the rather dull court life. He is intelligent and studious, much devoted to those he considers his loyal friends; and his innate amiability of character endears him to all.

The young king is skilled in all sports, but has no special liking for any. Last summer, during an informal fete at the Pena castle, in Cintra, a gay group from the palace, among which were his brother and other companions of his own age, came upon the Infante Don Manuel reading a scientific work in a shady corner of the park. In answer to the laughing remarks on his extremely studious mood he replied: "You see, I do not want people to say of me what is generally said of the second sons of reigning houses."

Although of a nervous temperament, he has great presence of mind and courage when occasion demands them. Two or three years ago his brother, the late crown prince, while at the riding school, was violently thrown by his horse and stunned by the fall. Don Manuel leaped upon the horse and galloped off to the palace, where, his parents being absent, he gave rapid and sensible orders. Then he awaited the queen, who was expected from her afternoon drive, and broke to her the news of the accident with great care so that she would not be alarmed. During the recent terrible events which placed him on the throne he also showed astonishing serenity and courage, throughout endeavoring to give support to his mother, whom he adores.

The horror, however, of the tragedy and the consciousness of the deep responsibilities that have fallen on him so unexpectedly appear to have utterly transformed his boyish nature. Those who are in contact with him say that the king has aged ten years in appearance and in mind since February 1, and that he gives the impression that it is no longer a boy who is speaking, but a man.

Every day he orders all the daily newspapers of every color to be brought to him and, shutting himself in his study, he pores over them for hours in the endeavor—as he himself explains—to judge of the situation of the country he governs and find out the wishes of his people.

Only a few days ago someone at the palace, noting the fatigue which is only too visible in the young king, due to the excess of work and continual audiences and ministerial conferences, gently remonstrated with his majesty, urging him to intrust some of the matters of secondary interest to others. Thus it was suggested that perusal of the newspapers might be avoided by a daily report. The young monarch answered quietly: "No; while I have life and strength left me to do so I will read them myself. One of my chief duties as king is to have perfect knowledge of the condition of public opinion in all matters day by day, and that I can only obtain directly from the newspapers."

THE LABOR PRESS.

Pertinent Political Remarks From Our Esteemed Contemporaries.

Fort Smith (Ark.) Union Sentinel: The workmen have now an opportunity to elect a president that is friendly to the cause of organized labor—W. J. Bryan. If he is not elected it will be the fault of the voters, for it's in their power to put him in a position that will result in good to all the people (except trusts and monopolies). Just notice who his enemies are and see who is supporting Taft, then take your choice.

Duluth (Minn.) Labor world: It may not be amiss to say that Mr. Gompers has not attempted to deliver the votes of union labor to any political party. He has been too long in the business to destroy his usefulness by such a futile move. Union labor has the intelligence to use its own judgment in such matters, as it does in directing its course in the field of industry. It has been kept fully informed of the attitude of a republican congress and a republican party convention, and it will govern its action at the polls next November accordingly.

Kansas City Labor Herald: A great deal is being said just now by the partisan republican press relative to President Gompers' statements in advocacy of the Denver platform and he is being referred to as a "dictator." Men who have the principles of trades unionism at heart, are not affected by this silly twaddle; they realize that the "Grand Old Man" has taken the only course which it was proper for him to pursue, after the snub he received in Chicago and the great majority of the members of organized labor intend to follow his advice and give a stinging rebuke to the party whose platform meets with the hearty approbation of men of the VanCleave, Post and Parry stamp who if they had it in their power would reduce the American workman to the standard of the Chink and Hindu.

Fort Smith (Ark.) Union Sentinel: While the Union Sentinel is a labor paper and published in the interests of all the labor people, regardless of political affiliation, we desire to say that we endorse W. J. Bryan and the democratic platform as being nearer in conformity to the platform of the American Federation of Labor than any other that has ever been written. Therefore we believe it's up to organized labor to support its friends and elect men who have shown a friendly spirit to our cause.

Sioux City (Ia.) Union Advocate: The Advocate is for Bryan because Bryan stands for the legislation organized labor seeks.

Buffalo (N. Y.) Progress: Workmen should read the vague, shifty, meaningless declaration of the republican platform on the subject of injunctions and then compare it with the anti-injunction planks of the democratic and independence parties.

Oklahoma City Labor News: The vote of organized labor is going to be put to the test this year. The republican party has treated with contempt the demands of organized labor for an anti-injunction declaration. The democratic party has made a declaration on the subject that meets the approval of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and other labor leaders. In some of the New England states, organized labor holds the balance of power. This ought to mean the election of William J. Bryan to the presidency.

Indianapolis (Ind.) Union: We do not presume to say that one cannot be a good trades unionist and not vote for Mr. Bryan; nor would we presume to say that one could not be a good trades unionist and not purchase labeled articles whenever possible. But we do say that no member of organized labor who thoroughly grasps the principles of the trade union movement can support Mr. Taft and be consistent. And in the event of the success of the republican ticket next fall those members of organized labor who disagree with the views of the president of the American Federation of Labor on this matter may find food for reflection.

Buffalo (N. Y.) Progress: Never before did Mr. Bryan have a united democratic party back of him. Never before did he so fully enjoy the confidence of the American people. Never before has the prospect of his election to the presidency been so bright.

Washington (D. C.) Trades Unionist: The daily papers of the country are just now printing columns of stuff telling what an "awful" mistake the president of the American Federation of Labor has made in plunging the labor movement into politics. Such remarkable misinformation coming from men of more than ordinary intelligence is calculated to make one lose confidence in the honesty of purpose of these writers. They are entirely wrong in their statements. Any action that this great leader of labor has taken or advised was by direction and the co-operation of the leading labor officials of the movement in this country at a conference held in Washington last March. The president of the American Federation of Labor and his colleagues have obeyed their instructions, and that their actions have received hearty indorsement a perusal of the editorials in the labor press of this country will convince any fair-minded individual. No mistakes have been made—the plutocratic press to the contrary notwithstanding.
