

PRESIDENT CARNOT KILLED.

HEAD OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC ASSASSINATED.

DONE BY AN ITALIAN ANARCHIST.

Stabbed to Death in the Midst of a Public Fete Held in His Honor—The Assault Causes the Profoundest Sensation—Expressions of Horror Heard on Every Hand.

A National Tragedy.

PARIS, June 24.—Sadi Carnot, president of the republic, was stabbed mortally about 9:15 this evening in Lyons by Giovanni Santo, an Italian anarchist twenty-one years old.

President Carnot went to Lyons to visit the exhibition of arts, sciences and industries. He left the chamber of commerce banquet, given in his honor, shortly after 9 o'clock and walked to his carriage, which was waiting in the Place de la Bourse. He had hardly taken his seat when Santo, a newspaper man in his hand, pressed through the crowd and sprang upon the carriage step. President Carnot started slightly. Santo snatched a dagger from the newspaper and plunged it into the president's abdomen, near the liver. The president sank back unconscious.

He was taken at once to the prefecture and the most skillful surgeons in the city were summoned. Meantime Santo was arrested.

The news spread swiftly to every part of the city. Infuriated crowds filled the streets. Before 10 o'clock an Italian restaurant had been sacked and the police were obliged to strain every nerve to protect the Italian consulate.

President Carnot arrived in Lyons yesterday and intended to remain there over Tuesday. He was accompanied by General Borius, chief of his military household, most of his other household's officials, Premier Dupuy, M. Bordeaux and other members of the cabinet. He was received enthusiastically at the station by the mayor and the district officials, who in twenty-seven landaus, drawn by horses draped with the tricolor, escorted him and his party to the Hotel de Ville, about three kilometres distant. Cheering crowds filled the street and gave the president such a welcome as he had seldom received. There was a luncheon at the hotel and in the evening a dinner at the prefecture.

From the balcony of the prefecture the president reviewed a large torchlight procession, which was followed by fireworks and an illumination. Today the president and his party paid a state visit to the exhibition in the Parc de la Tete d'Oru. Afterward the president held a reception at the prefecture. He planned to go to the Grand theatre on the Place de la Comedie this evening after the banquet at the chamber of commerce. He was in a peculiarly happy mood during the banquet and was noticeably elated by the cordiality of his reception, not only by the crowd outside the building, but also by the guests within. He was cheered incessantly from the moment he left the chamber of commerce until he took the carriage for the theatre.

The demonstrative enthusiasm of the crowd caused the confusion which gave Santo his opportunity, as he was able to push his way forward quite unnoticed until at the step of the carriage. As Santo sprang away from the carriage step and tried to escape he was seized and surrounded. But for the prompt interference of the police he would have been torn and trampled to death on the spot. As soon as the police extricated him from the hands of his captors they hurried him off to the station house.

When Santo was within a few feet of the carriage he waved a paper, as if intending to present a petition, and thus threw off their guard the persons nearest to the president. He was seized just as he was about to jump from the step and had but half drawn the dagger.

The president had repeated hemorrhages after he was taken to the prefecture. He sank gradually but steadily until 12:45 o'clock this morning, when he died. Mme. Carnot and her two sons left Paris at 11:57 last evening by special train for Lyons. All the ministers who could not go to Lyons with the president were in council at the Elysee at midnight. The senate and chamber will be convoked today.

Immediately after the president was established the horses attached to his carriage were started at a gallop for the prefecture. The president lay limp in the carriage. His eyes were closed and he was apparently lifeless. His clothes had been loosened, so that the red sash of the Legion of Honor was displayed. On his left side, near the waist, a wet red spot told the whole story of his wound. He was lifted with the greatest care from the carriage and was carried to his room on the first floor. There he was laid on the bed on which he had slept the night before, and Dr. Galliton, the mayor of the city, examined the

The young assassin's full name was given by him at the police station as Cesaro Giovanni Santo. He is nearly twenty-two years old and has a very small mustache and wore a light brown suit, with a peaked cap of the same color. On his way to the station he held his head down and glanced continually right and left as if looking for some possible means of escape. Upon being interrogated he gave his name, but professed to know too little of the language to say much more. His inability to speak much French is rather peculiar, as he has lived in Cotte for the last six months and is believed to have been considerably longer in the country. He went from Cotte to Lyons yesterday morning.

A dispatch received at midnight from Lyons gives this account of the assassination:

President Carnot had already entered his carriage when the attack was made upon him by Santo. He had partaken of refreshments at the chamber of commerce and the procession which had escorted him from the exhibition had been re-formed in the Place Des Cordeliers and had started for the Grand theatre, where a gala performance had been arranged in his honor. His carriage had hardly more than started amid the acclamations of the thousands, of spectators, and President Carnot was acknowledging the enthusiastic greetings of the people. In front of the Credit Lyonnais a man suddenly ran forward to the carriage, jumped to the step and stabbed the president to the heart with a dagger which he had concealed under his coat.

An eye-witness who was walking abreast the president's carriage with Adrian Dupuy, the premier's brother, says that as the president's carriage approached the Credit Lyonnais, his own attention was attracted by a slight disturbance in the front line of the crowd. He then saw the carriage stop. The president had fallen back against the cushions and his face had become livid. An outcry was raised at once. Hundreds shouted that an attempt had been made on the president's life and the crowd seemed suddenly to go mad with excitement.

Meanwhile the assassin had been felled to the ground from a blow by M. Rivaud, prefect of the Rhone. He was surrounded by an angry crowd and cries of "Lynch him" were heard on all sides.

In fact, had not a mob of mounted guards surrounded and protected the police on their way to the station the prisoner would have been taken away from them and beaten to death.

At 11:30 o'clock Sunday evening the surgeons at the prefecture issued this bulletin:

"The president's condition is alarming, but not hopeless. The wound is in the region of the liver. The hemorrhage which at first was very copious has now ceased."

A little more than an hour later the president was dead.

At 9 o'clock all who had been invited to attend the gala performance in the Grand theatre. Every seat outside the boxes was filled. The audience awaited impatiently for the arrival of the presidential party. Suddenly two men ran up to the main entrance and called out that the president had been killed. The news spread swiftly to the rear seats of the theatre and thence passed like wind over the great audience.

A few women cried out in horror, but the great majority of those present refused to believe the intelligence. Several government officials who were present left the theatre immediately to obtain more information. It appeared as if all Lyons was at that moment assembled in the Place de la Comedie and in the adjacent streets. The multitude was packed together like a wall. Suddenly a landau, preceded by four mounted gendarmes, dashed out of the Rue de la Republique. In it were Adrian Dupuy, Deputy Chaudey and M. Rivaud, the prefect.

The crowd, mistaking the landau for the president's carriage, cried "Viva Carnot, Viva la Republique." Chaudey, on the right, and Rivaud, on the left, called from the carriage in tones full of emotion:

"Do not shout; an attempt has just been made upon the life of the president."

The words had immediate effect upon the crowd. On every side expressions of execration and revenge filled the air. The landau was driven to the Grand theatre. Arriving there M. Rivaud and Chaudey proceeded to the president's box. Seeing them enter the box, a man rose from their seats in a body. Rivaud advanced to the front of the box and said in a voice broken by sobs:

"The president of the republic has been assassinated."

The announcement caused the greatest horror among the audience, and cries of "A mort, a mort," and "vengeance" were heard in all parts of the building. M. Rivaud, continuing, said that in the Rue de la Republique a wretch who had approached M. Carnot under the pretext of presenting a petition stabbed the president with a dagger.

Here M. Rivaud was again interrupted by shouts of indignation and was heard with difficulty when he added: "Do not make any task more painful. We have left M. Carnot in the hands of doctors. You will understand that under these circumstances, all hearts being filled with sorrow, the performance cannot take place."

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE ON ADJUTANT GENERAL TARSNEY.

CARRIED OFF BY MASKED RUFFIANS.

Called to a Telephone in a Colorado Springs Hotel at Midnight—Seized by Seven Masked Men—Found Twelve Hours Afterward Twenty-Five Miles From the Scene.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., June 23.—Adjutant General Tarsney of this state, said to be a brother of Congressman Tarsney of Missouri and ex-Congressman Tarsney of Michigan, was kidnaped from the Alamo hotel a few minutes after midnight this morning by masked men, supposed to be ex-deputy sheriffs, taken to the suburbs in a hack and there tarred and feathered. The outrage was the direct result of the recent Cripple Creek miners' war.

When police officers arrived General Tarsney could not be found and up to noon today he had not been heard from. About 1 o'clock, however, he was found at Palmer Lake, twenty-five miles away.

General Tarsney had been in the city several days attending the examination of the arrested Bull Hill miners, for whom he and Colonel B. F. Montgomery of Cripple Creek, appeared as attorneys.

OVERPOWERED IN A HOTEL OFFICE. At five minutes past 12 o'clock a call came over the telephone of the Alamo hotel for Tarsney. The clerk sent the night porter, the only other man in the hotel office, to call him. He appeared in a very few minutes and stepped up to the phone. He had hardly spoken a word into the receiver, when two men, with masks on their faces, entered and one advanced on Tarsney while the other remained near the door.

"We want you," said the first masked man, as the general turned on hearing footsteps.

"What do you want?" quietly asked Tarsney.

"We want you to come with us," was the reply.

"But I don't want to go anywhere," returned Tarsney, at the same time making an effort to retreat.

At this the masked man lunged forward, pistol in hand and struck General Tarsney a vicious blow with the weapon while the masked man near the door advanced to his companion's assistance. Tarsney staggered toward the office counter, but was ruthlessly seized by the two masked men and hurried toward the street.

The clerk did not interfere. He had been warned to keep his hands off by a third masked man who had suddenly appeared at the door.

In front of the hotel two hacks were standing and four other masked men were seen there. The general was hustled into one of the vehicles, the masked men scrambled in, and the drivers were ordered to be off, and up the street the party moved at a gallop.

In fifteen minutes Police Captain Galbright and Officers Harland and Gentry were on horses and riding furiously in the direction taken by the kidnapers and their victim. The officers had a poor trail to follow for it was pitch dark and they only knew the masked party had gone out of town to the north and they did not arrive on the scene in time.

QUICKLY TARRED AND FEATHERED. The drivers of the two hacks first brought the news to town. It was that the masked men had taken their victim to a point near Austin Bluffs between two and three miles out of town and covered him over with tar and feathers.

Sherman Crumley, one of the drivers, told the following story: "My brother and I own the hacks. Shortly before midnight, two men came to our stand and said they wanted to engage two hacks for a drive. They did not wear masks then. They told me to drive in front of the Alamo. I saw the struggle inside the hotel office and knowing that something unusual was up I started to drive away, but was stopped by men with masks on their faces and pistols in their hands. After they got in the hack, I was told where to drive to for the first time. They compelled me to whip the horses. On arriving at a point near Austin Bluffs they all got out. They made an awful lot of noise and kept on swearing and making threats. Several times on the way out I heard them threaten Tarsney's life. I think they had Tarsney's clothes off by the time they ordered the hack stopped, at least I when I first saw him on the ground. They had a bucket and a brush, and the deed was soon done."

A few minutes later Tarsney was left lying on the ground and the masked men re-entered the carriages and were driven to the Rock Island tracks. There they dismissed their drivers, not paying them but simply saying, "Good night, Johnny."

ORDERED OUT OF THE COUNTRY. Driver Crumley says that after the tar and feathers had been applied, Tarsney was told to move on out of El Paso county; that he was not wanted either in Cripple Creek or Colorado Springs, and that if he ever showed up again he would meet a worse fate than a dose of tar and feathers.

There was a meeting of twenty-five deputy sheriffs at Antler's work at 10 o'clock, and it is believed the plot against General Tarsney was hatched there.

A tremendous mass meeting of citizens was held at 10 o'clock, at which resolutions were adopted denouncing the outrage in the strongest language.

Sherman Crumley and Joan McKinney, who drove the hacks, have been placed under arrest.

Crumley, who owns both hacks, says one masked man remained with Tarsney, ostensibly to show him the way back to the city. Some of the men wanted to kill Tarsney, but their leader held them in check. Tarsney thanked this man and shook hands with him.

GOVERNOR WAITE AROUSED.

He Offers a Reward of $1,000 for the Perpetrators of the Outrage.

DENVER, Col., June 23.—Governor Waite was greatly excited over the outrage committed upon Adjutant General Tarsney. He offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of any of the participants, and at 10 o'clock said that unless Tarsney was found before noon he would increase the reward to $5,000. He also decided to go to the scene at once. Tarsney's wife and daughters were in the adjutant general's office, in the state house all morning almost in hysterics.

Mr. Tarsney was appointed adjutant general of Colorado by Governor Waite and was the personal representative of the governor during the police board troubles when the militia were opposite the city hall. His undaunted bearing at that time antagonized the police and their sympathizers, and it was freely stated that if shooting commenced he would be the first man to fall.

In the earlier stages of the Cripple Creek trouble he was legal adviser for some of the miners and since the settlement of the strike had resumed his services in that capacity. While the militia were in the field at Cripple Creek he was again the direct representative of the governor through whom orders were transmitted to General Brooks.

In this service he found himself opposed once more to many of the men aligned against him at the city hall.

Much Comment in Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The tarring and feathering of Adjutant General Tarsney by the Cripple Creek deputies was much discussed among members of the house to-day. He was here recently and met many members of the house. He has been spoken of as a possible Populist nominee for congress in the district now represented by Representative Bell. If elected it would be the third Tarsney brother to be sent to congress.

Representative Tarsney says that he had understood that his brother was in sympathy with the miners, although as adjutant-general he was at the head of the state militia and subject to the orders of Governor Waite.

Representatives Bell and Pence of Colorado say that Tarsney and the militia had stood between the posse of 1,000 deputy sheriffs and the miners and had prevented the deputies from descending on the miners.

A MASON'S HEART BURIED.

High Honors to the Memory of a Pioneer of the Order in Mexico.

OAKLAND, Cal., June 23.—In Mountain View cemetery, to-day, the heart of Ygnacio Herrera, a pioneer of the order, was buried in a casket wrapped in American and Mexican flags of silk.

April 24, 1894, the heart was brought from Mexico to Gethsemane chapel No. 5 of the Rose Croix in Oakland, and the casket in which it was deposited was buried in the walls of the Masonic temple in a place made known only to Masons. There it was kept until the present time.

A monument will mark the spot of final burial. The foundation stone will be laid by the grand lodge of Masons of the state.
