

FIFTH DAY OF THE DEBATE

Mr. Horr Discusses Fixed Ratio and Mr. Harvey Errors. CHICAGO, July 23.—When the Horr-Harvey debate on silver was resumed at the Illinois club rooms this afternoon, there was a fair audience.

Mr. Horr opened with a written argument touching the impossibility of maintaining a fixed ratio between gold and silver. As the result of experience all of the civilized nations of the globe had discarded silver as a standard money.

Mr. Harvey said that he had been called upon by letters and telegrams to give statements by Blaine, Ingalls and others regarding the demonetization of silver, but said the limitation of the debate would not admit of it.

MR. BLAND TALKS.

The Democratic Party Will Be Swamped If It Doesn't Stand Up for Silver.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 23.—Ex-Congressman Bland is in the city, and speaking of the silver question said: "There is no use trying to dodge this issue any longer. If the Democratic party does not declare for the free coinage of silver it will be wiped off the map."

"Do you think the next Democratic national convention will declare for independent free coinage?" "I do not know whether it will or not, but if it don't the party will not stand the ghost of a show."

A MOTHER'S SONG.

Hush, my baby, sweetly rest! Mother's boy focus no alarm! Plopped soft upon her breast, He knows naught of earthly harm. What though life be dark and sad— Mother's love can make it glad.

WORKED FOR HARDEN.

In a tiny bedroom in a brand new Western town faintly burned an oil stove. The stove was hardly more than an iron lamp with a rim above, on which rested a small stove-pan.

"I have the peppermint dropped," said the voice from the bed. The man took the spoon held out to him, and putting it into a silver cup, added a little hot water from the stove, stirring the mixture and testing its heat with his lips.

lution. Indeed, most of the towns that Harden had built were of the card-house order, and collapsed soon after his withdrawal; but fortunately he had always managed to sell most of the land he held, generally "to parties in the East," and he had never been so well off as this morning, when he sat amid his blue prints, figuring closely on the margin of a plat of Edensport.

The door of his office opened, a large, clumsily-built man of robust appearance, who looked as though born for a policeman, entered, speaking as he came in a full voice and with a decisive vigor.

"Well, Harden, I declare, I didn't think you'd be such a fool as to plat the bluff. Why, man, you can't sell that land, the hill stands on edge. I doubt if you can even get the timber slashed off."

He stepped back to the door and stood looking down the main street, where it ran up against a precipitous hill, thickly covered with dense evergreens. The hill literally stood on edge, and was so narrow across its high razor top that there was only foothold along the ridge for a thin veil of evergreens against the sky.

"I think," he said, in his pleasant, suave way, "I can place it with parties in the East."

"Well, perhaps you can," said the other, with a laugh; "but you must be careful they don't come out to look up their property. But that isn't what I came for. How do you stand on our new electric light plant? What are you going to subscribe to it?"

"One thousand, I guess."

"Well, you're the right sort, Harden."

Harden smiled modestly; he had suspected as much himself.

He sauntered out of the office toward the corner where the new Harden business block was getting its finishing coat of paint.

"I've let it for the 1st," Harden said.

"I've got the men all right enough; but you see, we've got the lower part painted. The last fellow that went up to work on the cornice kicked, and this fellow swears that he won't go up—that the hanging scaffold won't hold any more."

Harden glanced up at the scaffold, which hung like a broad-seated swing from grapping hooks above.

"There's no danger in the world," he said; then turning with his bright, conciliatory smile to the painter.

"Of course, I don't want you to take any risk. I'll take all responsibility myself. You see, this must be done by the 1st."

The man turned about swearing grumblingly. It was his last oath.

An hour later, in the middle of a gay time, the creaking rope near which he stood parted and the over-burdened scaffold shot its load downward.

Two men were lounging in the "Board of Trade" rooms. One was saying:

"Do you know what he has done for the widow?"

"Yes. Paid her the man's wages up to 11 o'clock. You know it wasn't a full half day's work.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Errors of Youth.

SUFFERERS FROM Nervous Debility, Youthful Indiscretions, Lost Manhood, BE YOUR OWN PHYSICIAN.

Many men, from the effects of youthful imprudence, have brought about a state of weakness that has reduced the general system so much, as to induce almost every other disease; and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever being suspected, they are doctored for everything but the right one.

During our extensive college and hospital practice we have observed and concentrated our attention on a certain and specific cure, hundreds of cases having been restored to perfect health by its use after all other remedies failed.

Make 10 pills. Take 1 pill at 8 p.m., and another on going to bed. This remedy is adapted to every case resulting from imprudence. The recuperative power of the system is astonishing, and it is continued for a short time changes the languid, debilitated, nervous condition to one of renewed life and vigor.

To those who would prefer to obtain it of us, by mail, we will send a box containing 40 pills, carefully compounded, will be sent by mail from our private laboratory, or we will furnish 5 packages, if desired.

5 POPULAR FREE BOOKS

Below we give a list of twenty-five good and useful books, suited to every member of the family. Many are by famous authors, known wherever the English language is spoken. Among them are the following:

DICKENS, DRUMMOND, JEROME, HARRADEN, BRADDON, KIPLING, STEVENSON.

And others almost as well known. Each number is a complete book, and each is bound in a separate cover with beautiful design like that shown in the illustration above.

No. 91. The Fatal Marriage. By Miss M. E. Braddon. This is a thrilling story, in which a man marries a lovely girl for her wealth, and as it should always be, he came to grief as a reward for his deception.

No. 92. The Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow. By Jerome K. Jerome. Mr. Jerome is known as the "English Mark Twain." He is a writer of the finest sort of fun, which is sure to be highly enjoyed by all who will read this book. It is considered his best.

No. 93. On Her Wedding Morn. By Bertha M. Clay, author of "Her Only Son," "A Golden Heart," and other stories. This is a companion novel to "Her Only Son," and will be read with the same intensity of feeling, with mingled joy and sadness as the characters in the book have cause for tears or laughter. It is a love story that must appeal to every reader.

No. 94. Her Only Son. By Bertha M. Clay. A thrilling account of the perilous adventures of a party seeking for a sunken Spanish treasure-ship.

No. 95. Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. By R. L. Stevenson.
