

Calhoun On Democracy.

The defeat of free coinage in the house Wednesday is to be deplored—not only because it shuts away from the people all hope of immediate financial relief, but especially because it shows that the national leaders of the democracy are in collusion with the moneyed power that rules the country and the old world. It confirms the worst fears of those who distrusted that the leadership of the party was not in sympathy with the people, that democracy as at present organized and controlled is the servant of Wall Street and is no more to be trusted than the gang of republican tariff robbers.

The action of Wednesday was inspired and directed by the managers of the democratic campaign for the presidency. Sneaks and cowards stood up in the house and vowed that they were true democrats, they were friendly to free coinage, they wished to see it, but this was an "inopportune time" to get it. So they voted against it. They had been told by Mr. Cleveland's managers—the men who will disperse the offices and divide the loaves and fishes if he is elected—that the passage of the bill would lose him the state of New York and make his defeat certain.

And then the crumb-begging curs stood up and swallowed their convictions and delivered their constituents into a longer and harder term of slavery to the debt holding magnates who have no real choice between Cleveland and Harrison—Lincoln Herald.

Songs of the People.

The Call has been remembered with a little volume of "Songs of the People," by the author, George Howard Gibson, which has just been issued from the press of the Alliance Publishing company of this city. The pamphlet contains fifteen songs, and all but three of them are the work of Mr. Gibson. All are full of earnestness and fire for the cause of the people, and many of them will no doubt have wide circulation. The only fault the Call finds with the hymns is that many of them are too long. Otherwise they are stirring and timely, and many of them show poetic talent far beyond the ordinary. The words to most of the songs have been set to music, and during the coming campaign they will wake the echoes all over the prairies of Nebraska and the west—Lincoln Call.
