

LISTEN TO THIS.

If It Does not Put a Flea in Your Ear There is Little Hope for You.

To every sovereign of the grand old volunteer state we call attention to a clipping from the Chicago Daily Press, a dispatch from Wall street, dated March 21, 1892, in which they instruct their cohorts and henchmen in the following language, Wall street's edict:

"We must proceed with caution and guard well every move made, for the lower orders of the people are already showing signs of restless commotion. Prudence will therefore dictate a policy of apparent yielding to the popular will until all of our plans are so far consummated that we can declare our designs without fear of any organized resistance.

"The Farmers Alliance and Knights of Labor organizations in the United States should be carefully watched by our trusted men, and we must take immediate steps to either control these organizations in our interest or disrupt them at the Omaha convention on July 4th. Our men must attend and direct its movements, else there will be set on foot such an antagonism to our designs as may require force to overcome; this at the present time would be premature, we are not yet ready for such a crisis, capital must protect itself in every possible manner through combination and legislation, the courts must be called to our aid, debts must be collected, bonds and mortgages foreclosed as rapidly as possible, when through process of law the common people have lost their homes they will be more tractable and easily governed."

This clipping says again, "History repeats itself, in regular circles this is truth. It is well known among our principle men now engaged in forming an imperialism of capital to govern the world. While they are doing this the people must be kept in a condition of political antagonism. The question of tariff reform must be urged through the organization known as the Democratic party, and questions of protection with reciprocity must be forced to public view through the Republican party. By thus dividing the voters we can get them to expend their energies in fighting each other over questions of no importance except as tethers to lead the common herd. Thus by discreet action we can secure all that has been so generously planned and thus far successfully accomplished."

Now, Brother Reformer of Tennessee, writes George V. Frey in the Toular, what do you think as a free-born American citizen? It makes the blood run chill in my veins and draws out every fiber of my manhood and patriotism to its utmost tension. It calls to my mind the prophesy of Lincoln and makes me believe with Jefferson that banking corporations are more dangerous and a greater menace to American free institutions than standing armies.

With the legal element fighting us as a unit, with hardly a Democrat or Republican in congress or the senate but represents some gigantic corporation, hounded down by European aristocracy, bound with relentless manacles to a single gold standard, imported bibles taxed 150 per cent with playing cards free of duty, Cleveland, the stuffed prophet of Wall street and avowed enemy to free silver fired at us Pete Turney lease ring and railroad back line politician. But you can't vote, Mr. Allianceman, unless you pledge yourself to support the nominee. All this is Democracy. Then we say God deliver us from Democracy!

Then brethren, what is the duty of the hour in this latter part of the 19th century?

I cast my lot with the People's party. Live or die, sink or swim, I rise to buckle on the armor of the American eagle has founded hiserie upon the summit of Mount Despotism. Bro. Poik has gone to his rest, but thank God this organization is a search warrant for Polks, Jacksons, Johnsons, Lincolns, from the pine-clad hills of frigid Maine to the floral shores of torrid Florida the gladsome cry is heard that "the dead is alive and the lost is found," and prodigals are coming home to the People's party.

Let us then be up and doing, with a heart for any fate, still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait. When the ides of November approach let us rally as one man to the standard of justice, and resolve, come what may, to cast our ballot for home and fireside, for God and humanity, for our cherished liberties, bought with the price of patriot's blood, and transmitted to us a sacred trust. Thus imbued with that humanitarian spirit of Patrick Henry, give me liberty or give me death.

Remember our ancestors waded blood to secure to us the blessings of liberty. If we have not manhood to go where duty calls against a world in arms we ought to be slaves.

That's What's the Matter.

The money of the rich will buy more than twice as much of the necessities of life as it would twenty-five years ago. The products of the labor of the poor will not sell for one-half as much money as they would then. This is the inequality, the burden of which the people are complaining.

People's Party Paper: The one thing that harrows the souls of the plutes, is the heaven inspired truth declared in the platform of the Omaha convention that "If any will not work neither shall he eat." The justice of this declaration is so apparent and so much in conformity with the decree of God, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," that it is frightening the soft-handed plutes out of their wits. Let us stick to the text.

HORSES.

Some Peculiarities Connected With One of the Noblest of Animals.

In that portion of Genesis which tells the story of Joseph, the famine, etc., we find the first historical allusion to the horse, and further on in Holy Writ we read of the horses of the great and wise Solomon, which numbered 40,000—that is if the 40,000 stalls for horses are to be taken as a criterion. Prior to 1066 the horses of England were never shod, William the Conqueror being the person who is given the credit of introducing horseshoeing into the British Isles.

The high state officials and the rich people of Egypt have a peculiar aversion to riding the horse, their favorite mount being a species of white ass, which is held as being a semi-sacred animal. Fine specimens of these snow-white creatures are seldom sold for what would be less than $1,000 in United States currency.

The Tar'ars have a species of hairless horses, which all have beautifully striped white-and-brown hoofs and "glass eyes." Pliny the Elder mentions a breed of horses "from a land far to the north of Lybia" which was distinguished on account of a woolly mane which extended from between the ears to the root of the tail!

Henry VIII. put a stop to the raising of inferior horses in England by having all slaughtered that were under 13 hands high at the age of 5 years.

In Japan the man of "quality" never forces his steed out of a walk; if the errand is one which demands speed the rider dismounts, ties the fore legs of his animal together and strikes off at a brisk gallop on foot.
