OPINIONS OF BANKERS. "

All Agree That the Repeal of the thorman Law Will Restore Confidence. New York, Aug. 30.-The following interviews with bankers of this city were had regarding the repeal of the silver purchasing act:

Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank: "The substantial majorities which have been preciated currency and in favor of sound money are especially gratifying because they show that the good sense of the American people is asserting itself through their representatives. The people of all sections now realize that the silver law has imperiled the industries of this country; they have imtries of this country; they have impressed members of congress with this belief, and congressmen have voted accordingly. There is no doubt the country may take fresh hope from the action of the house yesterday. It means that we will adopt as a nation the money of the world, and that all depressing conditions and influences will speedily be removed. Not less important than the effect upon business at home will be the effect abroad. This action insures a renewal of confidence in American securities.'

Frederick D. Tappan, president of the Gallatin National bank, said: "Congress has expressed itself with sufficient emphasis to let the world understand that this coun-try is to be managed financially upon a sound basis. It is certainly very encouraging to note that every part of the country is alive to the situation and that nothing short of absolute and unconditional repeal of the Sherman law will be satisfactory. We may look for such action speedily, I think, as a result of what the house has already done."

Brayton Ives, president of the Western National bank said: "It looks now as if good news would accumulate rapidly. We are getting from the house better results than had been anticipated from the senate. Wise legislation will restore confidence to our industries."

The six counties ask for over 87,000 bushels, the highest demand, 23,651 bushels, coming from Thomas county, and the lowest, 8,349 bushels, from Stanton county.

These figures show that it will take an enormous quantity of wheat to seed the arid district, a great deal more than will probably be donated. So far the commissioners have practically no seed in sight, and the counties which are able to render aid Louis.

But it was too late. The nickel. This she held in her hand nickel. This she held in her hand waiting for the conductor to come along.

The car was well filled and the conductor had plenty to do. He came through the car at Jersey street and hurriedly collected the fares. . He skipped the old lady. She was ready to pay him the nickel, but she did not offer it to him when he passed. After he had gone by her, her con-science reproached her, evidently, for she half held out her hand as if to urge the fare on the conductor. The conductor didn't notice the halfproffered fare. Then began a mighty struggle between the sordid and the Christian sides of the woman's character. She knew that she ought to give the money to the conductor, but She felt that every person in that car knew that she had held out her fare and she looked around with a defiant air as much as if to say:

Her look of defiance didn't last long, however. She smiled weakly and dropped her eyes to the floor. She started to hold out her hand and then pulled her arm back. She looked around the car again and this time she blushed. Then she sat bolt upright, evidently having come to an understanding with herself and drop-ped the nickel into the black silk bag. It looked very much as if the

"Well, what if I did?"

The conductor came through again. The old lady looked straight shead. Her lips were closely compressed. Her fingers twitched a bit when the conductor said, "fare, please," but she did not fish up the nickel. She glanced at her neighbors out of the corners of her eyes after the conductor had passed. She was extremely self-conscious. It was evident that she was not yet fully decided that she had done right.

As the car left Niagara square she looked around again. She probably caught someone's eye, for she blushed scarlet. Her defiant look was gone. She was embarrassed. She felt that everybody in the car was watching She reached down into the black bag and found the nickel. Then she beckoned to the conductor and handed it to him. "You skipped me, I guess," she said simply. The conductor was astonished, but he took

THAT MISCHIEVOUS CROW. Its Tricks Got an Office Boy Into a Peck of Trouble.

'Dolphus is not married; he says he thinks the "mahwid state is chock full of trepidations." His chosen companion in life is a tame crow named Lucy. This gentle name seems singularly inappropriate, as Lucy is the blackest and most illtempered crow that ever cawed.

Her one accomplishment is that she knows how to mail letters. 'Dolphus taught her to drop letters down the mail chute in the office, and he and Lucy are very proud of the achievement. It nearly brought them to grief one day. The office boy in one of the upper offices is deeply enamored of a pretty typewriter on the floor beneath, and occasionally, so rumor says, indites tender missives to her.

The other day, when he was writing, he called Lucy to him before the letter was ready to mail. Lucy sat there on his writing table for some time and the boy seemed in no haste to finish his epistle.

Finally Lucy could stand it no longer and snatched the open page in her boak and flew through the transom to the mail chute in the hall. The open letter was too big to go in. Lucy knew her duty; that letter must go down, so she flew to the elevator shaft and dropped it gently down, then flew away with a triumphant "caw."

The office boy was in despair. He tore madly down stairs only to find that the engineer, who had been oiling the top machinery of the elevator, had caught the letter and was reading it aloud to an interested audience, among which was the office boy's hated rival, the elevator boy.

Lucy fights very shy of the office bay now. 'Dolphus says Lucy can understand every word he says, so it may be that she understood when the office boy announced that if he caught her he'd wring her neck.

The Mosquito Enters Loudon.

It will be new to many readers that the mosquito is firmly established in London. It is to be found in certain large hotels which are the resort of visitors coming from the continent, and the supply seems to be maintained by constant importations from abroad. Visitors who are familiar with the noise and bite of the mosquito assert that it is the true pest in its worst form, and there is no reason for doubting their experience.

WHAT EVERY MAN IS WORTH.

Chemical Compounds of an Average Voter Are Valued at G18,300. An interesting exhibit at the national museum shows the physical ingredients which go to make up the average man, weighing 154 pounds. says the American Analyist A large glass jar holds the ninety-six pounds of water which his body contains. In other receptacles are three pounds of white of egg, a little less and one-half pounds of fat, eight and one-fourth pounds of phosphate of lime, one pound of carbonate of lime, three ounces of sugar and starch, seven ounces of fluoride of calcum, six ounces of phosphate of magnesia and a little ordinary table salt. Divided up into his primary chemical elements the same man is found to contain ninety-seven pounds of oxygen-enough to take up, under ordinary atmospheric pressure, the space of a room ten feet long, ten feet wide and ten feet high. His body also holds fifteen pounds of hydrogen, which, under the same conditions, would occupy somewhat more than two such rooms as that described. To these must be added three pounds and thirteen ounces of nitrogen. The carbon in the corpus of the individual referred to is represented by a foot cube of coal. It ought to be a diamond of the same size, because the stone is pure carbon, but the National museum has not such a one in its possession. A row of bottles contain the other elements going to make up the man. These are four ounces of chlorine, three and one-half ounces of fluorine, eight ounces of phosphorous, three and one-half ounces of brimstone, two and one-half ounces of sodium, two and one-half ounces of potassium, one-tenth of an ounce of iron, two ounces of magnesium. and three pounds and thirteen ounces of calcium. Gentlemen—I have been a victum of rheumatism for several years past. I have suffered intensely at times, and have gone to the Hot Springs of South Dakota, and the Hot Springs of Arkamas five times, seeking rebet. Under the case of your gentlemanty and efficient attendant. Mr. Henry Schmutte, I have, I think, entirely recovered.
