PASSING THE GUARD.

An Angel of Strength as Well as an Angel of Mercy.

Mary A. Bickerdyke, familiarly known among the soldiers as " Mother Bickerdyke," was a stalwart, loyal German woman who did heroic service luring the war.

She usually had her own tents and details of men to help her keep the soup-kettles going. She was accustomed to go where she pleased, just when she pleased, and as nearly all the soldiers knew her and her good works, and many of them had enjoyed a tin of soup from her kettles that were always full, no one thought of chaffenging her. "Who goes there?"

"Mother Bickerdyke," was the answer, and that was enough. But there came a lot of new recruits into samp at one point who knew nothing of Mother Bickerdyke or her good leeds.

One of these was placed on duty where Mother Bickerdyke was compelled to pass on her rounds among the hospitals. One dark night she returned at a late hour. A new guard was passing his beat not far from her little group of tents. As she approached he challenged her:-"Halt! Who goes there?"

"Mother Bickerdyke," she answered cheerily. "Advance and give the counter-

"I haven't the countersign." "You can't puss then."

'Yes, I will; that tent is where live, and I'm not going to bother myself to get the countersign at this late hour. Let me pass."

"No. you can't pass." "I'm Mother Bickerdyke," 'I don't care who you are. I'll never-

The sentence was not finished. She was physically a very powerful woman, and quick as a flash she sprang upon him, sent his gun in one direction and himself whirling in another.

"I think hereafter you'll know who Mother Bickerdyke is!" was her comment as she passed on and entered her

The poor fellow had been taken entirely by surprise, and spent the rest of his time till relieved from duty in searching for his gun, but was unable to find it till daylight next morning. He had heard of army nurses being angels of mercy; he now knew they were angels of strength. But after that he knew who Mother Bickerdyke was. - Home and Country.

ECONOMY AND HOARDING.

Two Different Things, but Often Considered the Same.

Economy and hoarding are two widely different things, although one scholarship in your name. Show this to your friend. Write at once. GRO use, to pass on." Thus says a helpful struck, "Gen. Del.," Omahs, Neb. article. It is wisdom to make provision for the future. For the improvident and shiftless I have small respect. It is not of this I speak, but of what is useless to its possessor that might do another good service, says a writer in Good Housekeeping.

Do not fill garret and closets with cast-off clothing, broken furniture, old books, etc. This is waste, and adds the burden of caring for worthless things. Give your poor neighbor your gowns and wraps that are out of style in fabric and fashion. When the day for making over comes, if it ever arrives, 10 to 1 the new material and ebst of work will lead you to decide upon new, and the old, growing older, s still on hand. Pass on your old garments; there is a world of good for some one in them. The home mis-sionary barrel would rejoice should you decide to swell its contents. Do not hoard even old trumpery. If you allow your house to be cumbered, moth and rust will corrupt. It is a law of nature that nothing be lost. Everything gravitates to purpose and use. Follow this law and send old books, magazines and papers to those whe have no money to buy them. They will be a godsend to many hungering and thirsting for this very sort of mind feed, and you will be enshrined in their memory, especially if the packages you send are labelled "pass on." You will understand the compound interest that accrues. If there is positively no other use for old broken-down furniture, let it be split up for kindling. It is better so than to fill up and gather dust and be consigned to the wood-pile at last How can a family live without a storeroom for useful, needed articles? What folly to fill it with useless trumpery! Let everything that can serve for convenience to others be passed on; otherwise clear out and clear off. If true that the maximum of good housekeeping is the minimum

"And why?" he asked tenderly, at the same time taking her upresisting little hands in his own. " And why?" he repeated, imperiously.

Blackened Teeth.

The blackened teeth of the Malays and Siamese are not produced as has been supposed here ofore, by coating them with a mixture of betel and lime, but by rubbing the tooth with a paste made from charred coccanut kernels. This is carefully applied to the teeth again and again until a black varnish bides the natural white. THE SOLOMON ISLANDS.

They Are the Headquarters of the Cannibals and Belong to England.

The cable has brought the intelligence that England has annexed the Solomon islands. The British have been lingering about the Solomon islands very parentally in late years and several times have landed and chastised the inhabitants. In 1880 a number of attacks on visiting ships were made by the natives, captains and crews being wantonly massacred. In 1886 trouble broke out once more. A schooner was wrecked on the coast. The savages boarded the ship and the captain and men were all killed, except one. In 1889 a flock of natives decoyed an Englishman named Nelson and three boys to one of their villages and then murdered them. The bodies of the victims were devoured by their murderers.

In fact, cannibalism is the popular fad on the Solomon islands, which have come to be known as the headquarters of the cannibals. The Solomon group of islands is the largest and as yet least known of any in the Pacific ocean, though among the very first to be discovered. There are seven or eight large mountainous islands, varying in length from seventy to 100 miles, and a great number of smaller islands ranging down to the tiny coral islet only half a mile across. Every chief has his butcher.

When a captive is taken in war he is handed over to this official and promptly dispatched. The body is then cut up and the joints are hung upon a tree reserved for that purpose in the village, and the people are invited to come and buy. If a man's wife misbehave he is at liberty to kill her and invite his friends to feast upon her flesh. Head-hunting is still carried on to some extent in connection with cannibalism. In case of the death of a chief a hear must be provided, and the launchin of a new war cance or the comple of a tamboo house must be signa zed in the same way. Within the radius of the head-hunting forays no native can be said to enjoy security of life for a single day.

BISON FOR ENGLISH PARKS. British Landowners Are Trying to Raise Them at Home.

It is, unfortunately, very questionable if the experiment of keeping and breeding the buffalo to the plains in English parks will be attended with any success. The bison on its native plains is accustomed to great heat in sentatives will probably lin ger for a comparatively long period preserved in parks, just as the ancient wild British cattle linger now. But, as in the case of the latter, the want of fresh blood and the consequent close interbreeding will tell in time and result in constantly diminishing fertility, until in the course of years the last representative of the race will die and the world know them no more. We may safely say the extinction will not happen in our time, or even in that of the next few generations, but it is feared that come it phine. A physician was summoned surely will.

ABOUT LIGHTNING.

How to Tell the Distance at Which

Thunder-Storm Is Raging. Although lightning and thunder occur atways simulianeously, an interval of shorter or longer duration is usually observed between these two phenomena, which is due to the fact that sound travels only at the rate of 1,100 feet per second, while the passage of light is almost instantaneous. Based upon this fact, it is an easy matter to tell, at least approximately, how many miles a thunder-storm is away. A normal pulse will beat about one stroke to the second and by counting the pulse-beats during the interval of the lightning and the thunder the lapse of seconds is arrived at and consequently the number of feet, which can be reduced to miles.

For example: If thirty seconds elapse between the flash of the lightning and the crash of thunder, the storm onter is at a distance of 33,000 feet, or about six and a half miles. An aimost accurate calculation can be made by using a watch with a minute

Misplaced "Little Breeches."

Bret Harte is so frequently complimented as the author of "Little breeches" that he is almost as sorry it was ever written as is Colonel John Hay, who would prefer his fame to rest on more ambitious work. A gushing lady, who prided herself upon her literary tastes, said to him once: "My dear Mr. Harte, I am so delighted to meet you. I have read everything you ever wrote; but, of all your dialect your 'Little Breeches.' 'I quite agree with you, madam," said Mr. Harte; "but you have put the little breeches on the wrong man. Labor Day in Lincoln.

Lixcot.s. Sept. 5.—Yesterday was a great day with the laborers of this city. Thousands of laboring men left their work to enjoy an outing at Lincoln park. The parade, which was fully a mile long, occurred at 10:30 a. m. and was witnessed by one of the largest crowds ever out to see any parade. arriving at the park, dinner was had, after which Mr. Harry M. Ives, president of the Kansas state federation of labor, spoke to a large crowd in the theatre building. Mr. Ives address, which was an hour and a quarter long, was a masterly one, showing study on the part of the speaker on labor ques-tions and conditions. Mr. Ives said that the laboring class is the only class that the laboring class is the only class that is not a class at all. They are the people, and that the crowning glory of the American natio is that the humblest digger in e ditch has as much direct politica power as the proudest millionaire. The balance of the afternoon was spent in witnessing sports, dancing and attending the Ideal Opera company's performance of "Said

A Mysterious Fire.

AUBORA, Neb., Sept. 5.—About 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the large barn of A. W. Howard, in the extreme northwest part of the city, was destroyed by fire. How it started is a mystery, as the only persons at home were Mrs. Howard and a little girl three years old, who were in the house at the time. There were three horses and a colt, considerable machinery, some hay and grain in the barn when the fire was started. Cne of the horses broke loose and got out. The others perished and the entire contents of the barn were consumed. A windmill standing near by was also burned. At one time it looked like the house would also be burned and everything was removed, but by hard work it was saved. The loss will probably be in the neighborhood of $1.000. It was partially insured in a oca mutual company.

HOME RULE BILL PASSED BY THE COMMONS.

GLADSTONE'S LONG FIGHT ENDER

The Bill Sent to the House of Lords and Read the Pirst Time-The Grand Old Man Almost Mobbed by His Admirers When He Emerged From the House on His Way Home -Had 34 Majority.

LONDON, Sept. 4.-Mr. Gladstone's long home rule fight in the house of commons is ended The bill was passed at 1 o'clock this morning by 301 to 267. It was hurried to the house of lords, which gave it the first reading and adjourned.

There was unusual enthusiasm along the route from Mr. Gladstone's residence to the house of commons. The streets were crowded with people whe wished to catch a glimpse of the great champion of Irish home rule, and while there was no organized demonstration the prime minister was cheered throughout the route.

As Mr. Gladstone with bared head, passed through the crowd and entered the house, it was noticed that his face was very pale. A number of Irish priests were prominent in the crowd in front of the house, and lifted their hats as the prime minister passed

Before the debate on the home rule bill could be resumed a long list of questions had to be answered. In reply to a question by Mr. John Redmond, Mr. Gladstone said that he would issue a commission upon the financial relations between England and Ireland at the beginning of the

Mr. James S. Wallace, advanced Liberal, said that he had voted for the bill on its second reading, but would be unable to support it now.

The bill was then put to its third reading and was passed by a vote of 301 to 267. The full import of the occasion was felt by the spectators and by the government adherents, and the culmination of the work in the house was accompanied by rounds of frantic cheering from the galleries and upon the floor.

There was an immense crowd of people in front of the house of com-people in front of the house of com-mons gates. There were many irish-men in the throng, and the sentiment of the crowd generally was for home rule and Gladstone. This was ex-pressed in many ways, by the singing of "The Wearing of the Green," and by enthusiastic cheers for Gladstone. It was noticed, however, that the cheering was mingled with some hooting.

When the announcement that the house had passed the home rule bill by a vote of 301 to 267 was received, the crowd went wild. They cheered, shouted, sung, embraced one another, smashed hats and did other absuratings to show their appreciation of the house's action. A WEALTHY MAN HANGED.

George S. Turner Pays the Penalty of

His Crimes on the Gallows. COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 4.—The hanging of George S. Turner at Spartameburg yesterday was a most unusual execution. Turner was a man of great wealth and prominence, being the owner of the Fingerville cotton factory. He ruined his sister-in-law and then killed her brother, and for three years he used his great wealth in employing the greatest legal talent in the state to defeat the death verdict through all sorts of technical-ities and by false witnesses. He was hanged at 12:57 yesterday. On account of threats of his rough mountain friends and the herculean efforts Tur-ner was making to defeat the law in some way, the jail was granded by troops. Turner said nothing on the scaffold and met death with fortinde. There is no intelligence exactly bow many men Turner killed. He is popu-larly credited with three.
