BREEZES FROM THE SOUTHWEST

Howard Berry's pack of fleet-footed grey hounds had scooped in nine prairie wolves at last accounts. We say wolves instead of the commonly accepted term coyote as those who profess to know their canis lupus claim that these dun-grey denizens of Holt county prairies are not coyotes at all. The hounds are a sort of sociable lot when a wolf is not concerned. On occasion they tour the country and call on the neighbors with friendly wagging tails.
