SOUTHWEST BREEZES

The southwest was visited by an inch of rain the night of the 3rd. But rain is no longer news.

Hap O'Dair, of Amelia, and Doc Spann, of Atkinson, visited Swan last Wednesday looking up trades.

Country editors, most of them reared on the soil, had no advice for plowing and planting and tillage to the farmer. The occupants of the swivel chairs in the offices of the big farm papers attend to that.

The myriads of insects of the genus culex—in other words, the mosquito—would make it plenty interesting for the nudist in the tall grass country these hot evenings.

Ned Saunders has acquired a 4-door, a Ford.

Historians base their story on official records; the country newspaper gets at the real history of a people by picturing the many minor incidents which makes life what it is.

Hugh James arrived Wednesday of last week from Minneapolis for a week's visit, surprising the home folks. He left yesterday, riding into Omaha with the Watsons who took a load of cattle to the market. Hugh is engaged in commercial art work in Minneapolis and is meeting with marked success.

Potato patches are nearly free from bugs this season and there are no hoppers nor beetles as yet. Last season and the season previous, bugs were very destructive to potato vines. The crop this season is expected to be bountiful.

The folks at the Bower ranch had a few anxious minutes Monday afternoon. Mr. Bower had gone out to where a stacker stood for some minor repairs and the folks at the house later saw him prostrate. They supposed he had been overcome by heat. Investigation disclosed that John was doing his fixing in the easiest possible attitude, lying down.

The few seconds for the morning shave, why cherish a bristle-grown chin?

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Baker and Mrs. Riley went to Albion Wednesday of last week. They were accompanied home by Miss Naomi Greenwood, who will visit here for a time.

The southwest was not without attractions of its own the 4th. A goodly number spent the day in a celebration at Kola. The traditional ball game, community sociability, fire crackers and some fire water predominated.

George Van Cleve, employed at the James ranch, aboard a good saddle nag, went to Atkinson last Wednesday, returning Saturday. Beside his mount, he brought two other horses back to the ranch.

It is said there are 11,000 less on relief in Nebraska than in mid-winter. Garden products help out a lot. And then you can't stay on relief and be caught gambling or buying booze. Maybe buying cigarettes ought to be included in the ban.

Statistics cover just about every thing. Every 26 minutes, day and night, there is a suicide in the U. S. A. Southwest Holt contributes nothing to this edifying statistical report. Worries are few down here. "Seldom is heard a discouraging word," and the breezes keep up air conditioned each day.

"Crazy with the heat" meant something more than a fatuous remark at the Riley ranch Monday. A cow in a herd on pasture was so affected by the intense heat that she became crazed, plunging thru fences and staggering as though having imbibed from recent legalized beverages. She was put in a barn and treated with cold water applied to her back and head, which restored sanity.

This paragraph is for the haves—the old scouts who were around O'Neill when Fred Gatz and Frank Toohill sold for a dime all the beefsteak one man could eat and everybody within a radius of 50 miles had a "store account" at Mann & Hecker's. None barred, if you are interested. Ed Hershiser was sheriff and spent little or no time parked in an office—probably had none. He was in evidence about town at most all hours with a weather eye on the rough necks. The principal sport was bronco breaking and horse racing. They didn't go to Omaha those days to "see the races." A half drunken puncher, Colt's six hanging at the hip, was breaking a bronc one day—a familiar procedure on the streets and open spaces. The lean little horse had gone the limit and stood helpless with heaving sides and quivering flanks at what is now called Fourth and Douglas streets. The liquor-soused puncher drew his Six with the intention of beating the exhausted pony over the head. The blow was about to descend when the iron grip of the sheriff encircled his wrist and his ribs was relieved of the gun. Ed was a man of action rather than words. Pat Gahagan once paid him the compliment, right to his face, saying he was the only man in Holt county who could go get 'em. In the little craftsman shop down the street is a brother of this early day sheriff, Eli Hershiser, who himself single handed in the long ago brought back to their anxious mothers three young rascals who were heading north for the reservation to live with the Indians and had got about as far as the Niobrara, but that is another story.
