Erratum

To The Frontier, O'Neill, Nebr. Dear Sirs: We wish to have you make a correction in regards to a mistake made in the account of our darling Kenneth's death. We want it understood Maxwell was not with Kenneth at O'Donnell's lake. There were none of his friends from Opportunity there either.

Had Maxwell been with his cousin, Kenneth, this terrible tragedy would never have happened to Kenneth, as Maxwell would not have let Kenneth go into deep water, knowing Ken's fear of water, and that he could not swim.

Kenneth was with his brother-in-laws, Ralph and Dwain Gray, also a cousin of the Grays, a Ralph Steens, at the time of his death.

Kenneth had none of his own relatives or friends with him in his hour of need. Kindly clear Maxwell of any connection with Kenneth's death.

Truly yours, Mr. and Mrs. John Berger.

CONGRESS As Seen by a Nebraskan

In November the Philippines will celebrate the signing of their new Constitution, which after ten years of trial will result in their complete independence. During this transition period many of the things that they used to ship to our country free of duty will be taxed in order to teach them what they will be up against as an independent nation dealing with all countries of the world.

Men who were born in North Nebraska and who have lived their whole lives, write to say that they have never seen such a small grain crop as we have this year, and that it is a picture no artist can paint. In the face of these reports from home comes a letter dated July 3 from Mr. Robert O'Brien, Chairman of the United States Tariff Commission here in Washington, stating that we are continuing to import a lot of farm commodities from foreign countries.

During the month of May of this year, 1935, we have imported into this country 3,035,615 bushels of corn; 2,282,694 bushels of rye; 564,151 bushels of wheat unfit for human consumption, and 282,645 bushels of other wheat; 1,179,453 bushels of barley; 1,124,163 bushels of oats; 1,360,016 bushels of flax; 14,136 tons of hay; 6,409,138 pounds of potatoes; 1,015,381 pounds of beef, and 340,267 pounds of pork.

Ever since the president announced his "share the wealth" plan many of the progressives have been in huddles talking it over. Some of them say openly that the plan sounds right but some of them also say that the plan was made for the purpose of offsetting the supreme court decision and his popularity in so far as "share the wealth" ideas are concerned.

A petition was filed yesterday on the Clerk's desk to discharge the committee on House Joint Resolution 300, authorizing and directing the payment of the adjusted service certificates to World War veterans out of the appropriation of four billion dollars. It is argued by those favoring this resolution that most veterans are in debt and in need, and are apprehensive if they are not paid now that the certificates may be paid within a few years on the basis of one-third of the present value of the dollar or less.

Members of congress openly tell each other the number of the offices in public and governmental buildings where they claim lobbyists are working for and against certain bills. One congressman, talking about the investigation into holding company lobby, stated today that the house is going to investigate and appropriate no funds but that the senate has agreed to investigate for $150,000 of the taxpayers money. He like others, feel that this investigation shouldn't cost the taxpayers $150,000.

The Frazier-Lemke legislation group have been mighty busy. A glance at the petition on the clerk's desk requesting the rules committee to be discharged so the bill can come before the members for consideration showed that 218 congressmen had signed the petition but on the other side of that petition were the names of twelve signers who requested that their names be stricken off the petition.

This shows that at one time there were actually 218 members (the necessary number) who wanted the bill to come up for consideration. But "somebody" has started a campaign to get those who have signed to take their names off. So another campaign has been started to get thirteen more names on the petition. A committee went down to see the president yesterday and asked him if he had requested congressmen to take their names from the petition. He is quoted as saying that he has nothing to do with it. It is also stated that he made no statement as to whether he is for or against the measure. So the prairie farm congressmen are starting another campaign with the hope that they may bring this legislation up before the house for consideration. They feel that if nearly 218 members have signed the petition and if more than 20 or 30 state legislatures have petitioned congress for its consideration that this represents enough public opinion and that the people's wishes should be the wishes of their representatives.

government river work between Fargo and Rulo when jobs were offered have recently been cut from relief rolls. A survey made showed only 32 men from relief rolls were working on the river job after 203 were notified by the relief office that jobs were available. Sixty-nine men reported when the job was opened and approximately 30 vanished after looking the job over. The relief office, has a standing order for 100 men from relief rolls for the river jobs.

Total liquor revenue, including beer tax receipts, collected since the control act became effective May 24, was $119,677 at the close of business July 9, according to Commissioner J. A. McEachon. License fees paid in during the period totaled $64,506, and registration fees totaled $1,010, for a grand total of $185,192. The state registration fees go to the liquor control fund, while license fees paid the commission go to the school funds.

Alcohol and spirits accounted for the bulk of the liquor tax revenue income from these items totalling $84,975. Tax on fortified wines, $916, and beer, including near beer, $29,761. The commission drive to collect the state tax on liquor sold after the act became effective, but without the state's revenue stamps thereon, produced $1,554 of revenue, the report showed.

While it is impossible to even estimate accurately the amount of income to the state's schools from liquor licenses, it undoubtedly will run into several hundred thousand dollars. In addition, cities and villages profit from liquor licenses by way of occupation taxes, which may equal the state license fee. License fees paid to the state commission cover only those licenses granted by it—package liquor licenses, off sale beer licenses within municipalities, on and off sale beer licenses outside municipalities, and manufacturers' wholesalers' railroads retail and carrier's licenses.

License fees for liquor drink sale licenses, and on sale beer licenses, both of which types are issued by the local governing board, go to the local school funds directly, and are not tabulated by the commission. Up to July 10, 365 liquor licenses have been granted by the state commission. Thirteen Nebraska towns have up to date voted for legal drink sales. They are: Norfolk, North Platte, Deshler, Omaha, Elkhorn, Pender, O'Neill, Columbus, Scottsbluff, Crawford, Talmadge and Greeley. Arlington will decide the question July 16. An election also will be held in Rulo, but no date has been set. According to Otto Bogner, of Crofton, everybody in Northeastern Nebraska is happy over the outlook for fine crops this year, after five successive seasons of drouth and grasshopper devastation. He said the corn is growing so fast that farmers must hump themselves to get their fields laid by before the stalks get too tall. That is our main crop and it looks as tho we are going to have a big one. Oats have come thru in fine shape and are now almost ready for harvest. There has been no serious rust damage and the stand is so heavy that I believe a good many fields will go as high as fifty bushels to the acre. Our people have been immensely heartened by the great change for the better that has taken place in the agricultural outlook for the Northeastern country. The general feeling is decidedly cheerful and optimistic.

A. E. Anderson, state and federal agricultural statistician, estimates Nebraska's 1935 winter wheat crop at 40,460,000 bushels. He said the prospects are the best in five years, despite a shrinkage of thirty per cent due to rust and premature ripening. Anderson's estimate indicates an average yield of 17 bushels per acre from the two million, three hundred eighty thousand acres of winter wheat left for harvest. The July estimate is slightly higher than 40,178,000 bushels forecast in June. The 1935 estimated production of winter wheat compares with 15,008,000 bushels in 1934, 25,894,000 in 1933, 25,398,000 in 1932 and 57,431,000 in 1931.

Prior to the damage caused by rust and heat, which caused premature ripening, Nebraska had a prospect for nearly 58,000,000 bushels of wheat or average yield of slightly more than 24 bushels, Anderson said. Hail damage removed 55,000 acres of winter wheat from production estimates since May 1st.

Shrinkage due to weather conditions was as great, if not greater than that due to black stem rust, Anderson stated. Nearly all of the wheat ripened prematurely due to the high temperatures. The wheat had been acclimated to cool, wet weather, had made a heavy, tender growth and the sudden change to high temperatures which caused the development of rust, caused the wheat to ripen prematurely and resulted in shrunken grain.

According to State Superintendent Taylor, distribution of the largest semi-annual state school apportionment in five years is now being made among 6,542 school districts entitled to share in it. The amount is $533,199, which compares with $526,394 in July a year ago and $408,601 in January of this year. One-fourth of the total is divided equally among all of the school districts eligible under the apportionment, giving each of them $20.38. The remaining three-fourths is split on the basis of school census enumeration in the different districts. The number of children listed in the whole state is 409,528, and each district gets a fraction less than 98 cents for each child of school age.

The formation of a Republican river valley organization for the purpose of advancing river work and rehabilitation in the flood stricken area is now underway. Representatives of 25 towns recently met with Governor Cochran and, at the suggestion of Wade Marton, of Stratton, decided to organize so that the valley needs may be properly summarized and presented to officials at Lincoln and at Washington.

Cochran approved the organization and pledged himself to do everything possible to further the rehabilitation work. In behalf of the organization Governor Cochran is accompanying a group of Republican valley representatives to Washington to interview National Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, Public Works Director H. L. Ickes, and Frank Walker, co-ordinator of all New Deal agencies, relative to works project that may be formulated and funds allotted to insure Southwestern Nebraska against repetition of the recent disaster.

Included among undertakings which the Nebraskans will suggest at Washington to be started in the Republican valley area are permanent storage reservoirs to hold back flood waters of that stream and its tributaries, which also would provide needed irrigation for crops in dry weather; construction of permanent bridges to fit in with flood control work; improving water channels; reclaiming lands damaged by the flood; and other matters. The first examinations under the 1935 act placing the state game, forestation and parks commission on a civil service basis were recently announced by Secretary Frank B. O'Connell. O'Connell said examination for the position of deputy conservation officer, junior grade, will be held here July 22nd, at Madison July 23rd and North Platte, July 25th.
