SOUTHWEST BREEZES

Mrs. John Hazelbaker visited at the home of Mrs. Weeks in Amelia Monday.

Edgar Peterson, of Amelia, was over in Swan precinct at P. J. Kennedy's Monday.

Sheriff Duffy brought out the election supplies for Swan precinct Saturday last.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dieks, the first to vote in Swan Tuesday morning, hastened on thereafter on a trip to Atkinson.

Automobiles are taking a toll of jack rabbits on highway 11. Twenty-four dead ones were counted on a recent twenty-mile drive.

Lloyd James joined a party at Atkinson, consisting of George Campbell, Harry Fullerton and John Kramer, departing Sunday for Detroit, the three buying new cars through Mr. Campbell's agency.

H. L. James substituted for Rafe Shaw on the election board, Mr. Shaw having been called on Saturday to Ainsworth by reason of the death of his brother-in-law, Mr. Baker.

Victor Howith, our heavy weight but efficient and popular township clerk, made a trip to the growing and hustling county seat last Saturday.

Three snow-white pheasants are reported being seen in the Gillman neighborhood. Bus Gillman catching one that went into hiding under a huge tumble weed. They are considered very rare, these being the first we have heard of in this section.

The corn-hog reduction went over with a bang in some spots. We have heard of no one around here having an opportunity to vote on it. But we probably would have done like the rest—sure, we'll take your money; why sweat and work around out in the fields and in hog pens if you'll pay us for loafing.

Vernon Sparks has made something of a killing among the hated race of coyotes this early in the season. His fast and long-leaping hounds have scooped in twenty-four up to date, most of them being garnered in counties far to the southwest of Swan.

A white speck floating leisurely in the distant northern sky on Monday afternoon was pronounced a balloon by close observers, speculation running as to whether it might be an armistice day performer carried out of his longitude and latitude by some twist of atmospheric circumstances or a stratosphere frontiersman floating around under like conditions. At any rate, neighbor telephoned to neighbor to chase outside and take in this unusual sight. The huge white bag, which was the stratosphere balloon that has had much publicity, is said to have come down near White Lake, S. D., after attaining an altitude of 75,000 feet.

Early risers on the moon drenched mornings get a glimpse of what nature can do spreading diadems over the country's brown autumn robes. The hoar frost sparkles like innumerable diamonds on a delicately woven web of silk. Taking in the quiet beauty of the matchless scene the thumpy bump of rattling wagons comes across the frost-bitten morning air from a mile or more away. It is Claude Andrews at the E. E. Young place headed for the field to get a day-break start "pickin' corn."

Many out this way who knew him in the Kirkaid homestead days, regretted to learn of the sudden death at O'Neill Monday of James H. McPharlin. He was held in high esteem throughout this community where he once roamed the open prairies training the Lewellans and Irish Setters for the national field meets once held in this county. R.S.
