Women should take only liquid laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true. Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. Doctors use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara - both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

"A Girl and a Ghost"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Huntetr.

ND I'm certainly glad you didn't drop dead, Mary Greene A the night a ghost walked right into your bedroom.

Pull up your chairs a little closer, boys and girls, turn the light down low and listen to Mary's true ghost story. It is worth

When Mary moved out to a farm she was in just the sort of a mood that ghosts like. Her school work had made her nervous and sickly, and her parents decided that she needed a rest and fresh air. So they packed her off in April, 1925, to a farm owned by friends.

Now Mary always has had a horror of ghost stories and it was ghost stories that this farmer doted on. Mary says his bedtime stories always told of weird happenings at midnight-of shrouded figures with clanking chains-of ghostly faces peering into windows-weird cries, footsteps and unexplained thumpings on walls.

One night, Mary says, after a particularly hair-raising series of horror stories, she climbed the wooden stairs to her bedroom with more or less fear and trembling. She was nervous and lay sleeplessly in bed, watching the moonbeams throw ghostly patterns on the floor. The rest of the family had gone to sleep long since.

The Night Was a Deathly Quiet One.

The night was one of those intensely quiet ones, peculiar to the country. Not a breath of air stirred and the leaves on the trees in the yard might have been painted for all the noise they made. Once in the distance, a far-off train whistled and the screaming note, as it died down, made the silence all the more impressive,

The grandfather clock downstairs began to strike-its slow, sonorous notes sounded to the girl in bed like the mournful pealing of a churchbell-tolling the service for the dead!

She counted the strokes carefully. At eleven she held her breath and hoped it would be the last. And as she listened, hoping against hope that the hour she dreaded would not strike, a dog howled in the distance.

The Witching Hour Brings Horror to Mary. She shivered and drew the bedclothes over her head. And as she did-the clock struck TWELVE. Mary says the last notes of midnight had hardly died before she heard other sounds that brought her heart into her mouth in abject terror. Each sound seemed, to the terror-stricken girl, more horrible than the other.

dismally and in the silence of that awful night she heard plainly the thump, thump, thump of a heavy object being dragged through the silent house.

And the awful sounds were soon upstairs! She heard them coming toward her room. She sat up stiffly in bed and wet her lips-dry from horror-resolved to cry out. Finally words came but the weak, squeaky voice sounded strange and unlike her own. "Who's there?"

The Intruder Was "Silent as a Ghost."

Silence. The noises stopped but as the terror-stricken girl listened, she was sure she could hear something breathing just outside her door. The door was closed but unlocked and as she stared, her heart almost stopped beating.

The door moved! Mary, now beside herself, tried to scream. She opened wide her mouth but no sound came from her parched throat. Stiff and rigid-her bulging eyes staring in terror, she waited for the worst! And it was not long in coming.

Her door slowly opened-in the bright moonlight, she saw a figure shrouded in white-and as she sat there, too tense even to faint, the dark tone of its background tunes thing approached her bed!

Visitor From the Grave Is Too Much for Mary. She took a deep breath—as persons in great danger often do-and— This marguerita print tells you horrible as it is to relate-into her nostrils came the overpowering odor of the grave. The sickening stench of death. Wow! That was the straw that broke the camel's back. And it is all that Mary remembers.

But she knows she must have screamed because a scream brought the farmer into her room on the run with a shotgun that hadn't been off the wall since Armistice day.

The minute the farmer sniffed the ghost-I mean the goat-he knew what had happened. That pet billy-goat of his had gone and pulled his stake and dragging stake and chain after him, bad come right into the

Mary Says Ghosts Still Get Her Goat. And not only that-Billy had pulled one of his old tricks-robbing the clothes line-and there, on his solled back, trailed one of Ma's nice, clean bed-sheets!

But that isn't what got Mary's goat. What burned her up was that the farmer seemed more concerned about who left the back door open than he was about her nearly dying of fright. "I don't dislike goats any more," Mary ends her interesting letter, "I hate them."

And that goes for me, too, Mary. I'd rather smell a ghost any day. @-WNU Service.

Green, White and Red Colors of Mexico's Flag

The colors of the Mexican flag, green, white and red, are symbolical of the aspirations of Mexico at the time it began its life as an independent nation. However, states an authority in the Washington Post, the meaning of the national coat of arms is much more deeply rooted in the history, in the traditions and in the personality of the country. The eagle which perched upon a cactus plant, strangling a serpent, is rich in meaning, rich in symbolism. For centuries on end it has lived in the hearts of the Mexicans, in the hearts of the people who descended from the first settlers of the Valley of Mexico; and, besides being very much alive in cherished traditions, it may have lived in reality; it must have lived in reality.

In the beginning of the Fourteenth century the Aztecs, an Inof the country. In 1325, having halted on the shore of the principal lake, they beheld, perched upon a cactus plant, a royal eagle of extraordinary size and beauty, with a serpent in its talons and its broad wings opened to the sun. This was considered an excellent omen by the priests and the place was chosen as the site of a great Aztec city. The foundations of this future metropolis were laid at once by sinking piles into the shallows. for the low marshes were half buried in water. GARDEN prints, as cool and colorful as an English countryside, will be worn by smart women for cruise and resort wear and early spring. Leading designers are turning out youthful costumes made of these refreshing prints in soft crepes with a supple draping quality that endears them to all. It is this type of frock that centers the stage at the present, for it answers the call for a springlike touch with midseason furs and

Of course, if you are going or have gone south you will like the idea of a jacket ensemble styled after the manner of the models here pictured. Note that the silk to the left has a white background, which makes it admirable for southland resort wear. Then, too, these pure silk prints that pattern color against white have the "new" look which says at a glance that they are of this season's vintage. The tulip motif of the garden silk selected by the designer for the fashioning of this dress is in realistic colorings that make the thrills of spring pulse through your entire system. An insert trim, in form of a hand-piped leaf motif, enhances the blouse-bodice. Other significant style details are the subtle front flare in the skirt, the medium length open sleeve and particularly the tuxedo front of the jacket ending in a clever pocket arrangement. The hat is of white toya with grosgrain band trim.

The beauty of the other two-piece ensemble pictured is that the rich it to immediate wear under the winter fur coats of those who are not treking southward this season. something interesting - that the daisy patternings are being featured in many of the new silks. Then, too, the message of grosgrain ribbon bindings is conveyed in the revers. This use of grosgrain ribbon to finish edges is pronounced throughout the field of dress design for spring. A most welcome gesture it is, too, for it keys a color scheme to perfection in that the grosgrain ribbon repeats, thereby emphasizing a dominant color-tone of the print. That is, if you want your costume to look navy or brown or green or deep red, assuming that the print carries the color itself, trimming touches of matching grosgrain ribbon turn the trick to a nicety. In the instance of the model pictured an unusual neckline is achieved with a bow trim grosgrain ribbon such as binds the wide revers of the short jacket. In a number of cases the new garden prints employ multicolor effects, with one tone dominating, the other bright, "springy" refreshing hues introduced to achieve contrast and variety. Then, again, two-color schemes are carried out in a great many instances such as cerise florals in solid tone drifting over navy blue or large white daisies silhouetted against a dark ground.

Nearly every print dress has its hip-length jacket of self fabric, either in loose boxy types or in models semi-fitting, that have two or three buttons at the waistline. As a rule a very simple styling is given to the skirt. The all-around pleated skirt is on the program, but for practical about-town wear the narrow silhouette with a subtle unobtrusive pleat or shirred device, just enough to permit freedom of action is first choice.

NEW COLOR SCHEMES SEEN ON PARISIANS

Striking color combinations are featured by all leading dressmakers. In addition to black, which is always enhanced by vivid touches, there are many new color schemes, often daring but always effective. One combination that is more fashionable than ever is the use of moss green or water green with dark reddish brown. Rochas combines a subdued tone of blue with a faded old-fashioned red for merning and day models.

Another fashionable combination seen in many houses is grenat enhancing pale blue. Mainbocher shows several unusual color schemes, such as gray with redbrown and lapis, dark green with burgundy, violet with gold, gray with red, brown and lapis blue: green with coral and shell pink with gold.

For Resort and Spring

Colors Will Be Brilliant The vogue for strong colors which was launched last fall influences the colors used for spring and resort wear. Palm Beach colors slated for importance are yellowish tan, sun orange, chartreuse, dusty pink, strong blues, gray blue, "Rose of the Rancho" rose, wine with a yellowish cast. White is also slated for an important position.

Prints are also influenced by the demand for color. Hand-screened and hand-blocked prints permit new and interesting color combinations.

Flared Back

The smart swagger coat usually has a trick flared back that permits a free and easy stride in brisk autumn weather. Black and white plaid woolens are popular for this type of coat,

PEACE BIRTHRIGHT OF CHILD; BANISH FEAR FROM MIND

Fear, one of man's greatest ene mies and the root of much evil overwhelming the adult, acquires all too bardy a growth in childhood. Yet readers of the current issue of the Parents' Magazine are reminded by Psychologist Rhoda Bacmeister that if fear had no survival value, it would not have persisted to the degree it has; that a little fear is an excellent thing to keep humans out of danger. It is caution and foresight, the habit of going slowly and thinking when in doubt that father and mother should spare no effort to develop in their offspring.

Fears come and go. Mrs. Bacmeister admits it is easier to know what to do for a timid child than to understand where the fears come from in the first place, but says it is important to find out. Her anaylsis monster. identifies several varieties of fears.

Baby cries at the sight of a floating duck in his tub. Why? Because once he lost his balance in the bath while watching ducky. Three-yearold Bobby runs from a salamander. "Shame on Bobby," cried mother, forgetting the fuss she makes when anything crawling comes towards her. Here's a fear that comes from contagion. Small Susie's afraid to go to bed in the dark. The chances are this is a direct suggestion fear-induced, perhaps, by mother who cautions Susie against doing so and so lest "the boogey man" catch her. Mrs. Bacmeister remarks: "It is both cruel and stupid to warp a child's character by making fear the emotion that controls him; it is a repressive and inefficient control at best."

In order to help the child get rid of unreasoning fears, the psychologist suggests replacing the old association with a new and pleasant one and urges calm reassurance when a child is frightened. "Never rush nor swoop," says she. "Take it easy!"

We learn from the lady who knows that among the more immediate and less abstract reasons for a child's anxiety attitudes and nervous tension the most harmful is "the thrillmongering" children's radio program in which voices are keyed up and sound effects used to give the impression of intense, usually terrifying emotion. Says Mrs Bacmeister, mincing no words:

"This fear impression the youngsters get only too well. The entirely unsuitable emotional strain disorganizes their nerves. They have bad dreams, restless sleep, are persistently timid rather than panic stricken
