THE NEBRASKA SCENE

and 1934, due no doubt to the two years severe drouth. The drouth caused a shortage in poultry feeds.
The poultry and egg income in Nebraska comes in, not once a year but throughout the year in the form of dividends, paying the living costs and necessary bills for living expenses; paying taxes, fuel for the car, clothing for the children, and in fact, forms a most vital source of Nebraska's farm income. By cooperating with state and federal authorities and paying closer attention to grading, Nebraska poultry and egg producers can cut a sizeable swath in the loss incurred thru marketing inferior products. Hatcheries are a big help in this direction.
No use to breathe a sigh of relief when March is gone, in the belief that the windiest month of the year is over. Statistics for Nebraska show that April is the windiest month of the year in this state while May and November often experience a greater movement of wind than the popularly-termed kite flying and blustery month of March.
Experiments covering a ten-year period by the U. S. government weather bureau at Lincoln show that April is the windiest month of the year in Nebraska. August has the least wind. Experiments were conducted at North Platte, Omaha, Lincoln, Sioux City and Valentine. The April high and the August low of wind movement was prevalent throughout the experiment.
Incidentally, January is the coldest month of the year, vying with February and December for the dubious honors. June, September and October are about tied as the months of most sunshine in Nebraska, while July holds the record as hottest.
Hugh H. Drake, chairman of the state railway commission, has worked out a transportation plan which includes live-and-let-live policies for both railroads and truck lines. Rates should be adjusted, he said, so that the general field of trucking would be limited to between 150 and 200 miles. Railroads cannot compete with trucks in 25 mile and 50 mile hauls, he declared, no matter how hard they try.
One of the most pertinent plans applied to Nebraska by the Roosevelt administration is about to have its acid test near Omaha. This federal farmstead project which, on a larger scale, corresponds to six other resettlement projects in the state, will give so-called stranded farm families a chance to rehabilitate themselves on small acreages ranging from 7 to 10 acres.

Altho the resettlement projects are offered as a solution to America's farm problem, informed economists say that this feature of the new deal is merely an idle jesture. No figures have been compiled to prove the new deal's case as yet.
An amendment to the constitution is about to be proposed to prohibit use of gasoline tax funds for non-highway purposes. The amendment will be framed so as not to disturb the 1c per gallon gas tax to provide social security funds it is stated.
A lot of fellows who woo some girl for two or three years and finally marry her, find out that while they may have been engaged in the pursuit of happiness they didn't catch it after all.

senate amendment will be discussed when the bill comes up for final passage in the house. The bill is being held up in the committee on education in the house because some members feel that an increase from three to twelve million dollars is too much for this work.
Calves liver costs 69c a pound here. Pork chops are selling for 50c a pound. The price of food in Washington is high. Many grocery stores here keep open until midnight. They sell meats and groceries of all kinds in these stores and besides that they set aside half of their stores for the sale of liquors, wines and whiskies of every description. One clerk tells us they make most of their money in these stores from liquor sales. This town has more liquor stores than any other town it's size.
