

Over the County

SOUTHWEST BREEZES

By Romaine Saunders

Whatever else the New Deal has done, Mutt and Jeff are still with us.

Doris Carpenter is up from Burwell visiting relatives in this community.

Well, nobody can say the Cleveland convention "just went thru a form."

There are more than grass roots out this way. The stems are half the height of a horse.

Landon booms may be all right but most of us in Holt county would prefer a boom with the one left off.

Mr. and Mrs. Casper Addison and two little sons, with Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, visited Sunday afternoon at the Saunders home.

Mrs. Withers just returned from Colorado where she visited her mother who is in declining health. Her son, Harold Chapman, came from Sioux Falls and took her with him.

The professional gentleman, merchant, mechanic or statesman eligible for hymeneal happiness will not be searching the booze bars for a feminine beer sipper and cigarette puffer as a mate to head his household.

As to replacing Franklin D. in the White House, a democrat will tell you it can't be done. There is a three-to-one majority down this way who are favoring the replacement—more than that; they are doing something about it.

An unusual sight an evening last week. With a full moon hung to the south a rainbow curved across a clear space in the otherwise clouded northern heavens. It was a picture in the original of the beauty spread by the brush of nature on the canopy of a night sky.

H. L. James and Charley Petersen left a week ago for Texas, New Mexico and other White Face cattle sections of the west with the view of purchasing cattle to help convert a part of our grass-grown hills and valleys into marketable beef. Both of these gentlemen are ranging many cattle this season but there is room for as many more.

An airplane droned across the southwest a day recently, headed north by northeast. A search for the boys' field glasses to get a closer view disclosed that they had probably taken them to the lake with them and by that time the lone ship of the air was disappearing among the clouds far to the north.

Many in this community were grieved to learn of the sudden death at Atkinson of Mr. McMinden. He was the ring manager at the Weller sale pavillion and had no equal as a judge of horses. Quick and alert he made an ideal ring manager for a sale and his sudden taking off is greatly to be regretted.

Whether the joke is on the writer or on the printer, our neighbor across the corner may be tossing his sombrero and big boots to the discard and assume the role of an M. D. since being referred to in this column as doctor. We thought we had written his name De Lance, but somehow it appeared Dr. Lance and now maybe the neighbors will feel justified in addressing our expert cow man as doc.

Lester Thompson got enough of Canadian agricultural opportunities and has disposed of his interests acquired there some two years ago and has returned to the alluring southwest, recently locating down by the lake. Once charmed by the beauty, the freedom, the wealth of our grass-covered prairies and abundantly watered vales, you're not at home elsewhere.

Recently a fine letter came from our old friend John Brennan, eldest son of the late Col. Neil Brennan of O'Neill. He is at Salt Lake City and speaks with considerable feeling of old friends in Holt county. A fragrant pressed rose was enclosed with the letter, John feeling it is more appropriate to give a flower now than to strew them on the mound after being numbered among those lying in the Silent City.

SHIELDS

On Sunday, May 31, a few old time friends and neighbors of this locality decided to spring a surprise visit on Mr. and Mrs. Pete Walnofer who were formally located in this vicinity, but now peacefully and contentedly live on Sandy creek north and west of Atkinson on a beautiful home surrounded by shade trees, lilac bushes and roses in profusion, and to our surprise, a new arrival that commanded a good deal of attention.

Mr. Walnofer purchased this place last spring, paying a small price compared to its value as a producer even in dry seasons. A valley on both sides of the creek, slightly rolling towards the stream, where there is one of the nicest artificial lakes in the county. The lake is privately owned and is known as Cotton lake, and is filled with trout. The lake adjoins Pete's land. It is fed by immense springs and comprises about four acres of deep fresh water.

Trespassing notices appear from all angles but the temptation to examine the construction was too great to resist. The construction appeared simple. The water is obstructed to a certain height with a cement dam reinforced with a dike on the outside and coarse gravel on the inside, tapering back pretty well into the lake. The spillway and the chute are made of cement, and protected by a wire mesh to avoid the loss of trout over the dam. They say freshets have no effect on the lake as it is several feet above the stream.

It is as nice a resort as there is in the county, but could be duplicated several places along our own streams that once abounded with trout and with no notices visible for those who happened along.

Next we went over and viewed the crops that looked very nice, compared to what we have had for several years, but owing to the general crop prospect being good, the attraction was not so strong. When we passed thru a huge grove where the dense foliage and vines almost obliterating the sunlight, where raspberries and choke cherries and other wild fruit grew in among the native trees, it was a treat for anyone who enjoys nature's handiwork.

The man that used to own this place, I understand, was a fellow by the name of Schaff, an old-timer, I suppose. As it looks to me he spent a small fortune on improvements and owing to a condition caused by a general depression, lost out like a good many others, thru no fault of their own, and had to surrender it after a good deal of worry and discomfort. It looks to me as if this man made a wonderful attempt to provide and establish a comfortable and commodious home for himself and family, and deserves a good deal of credit.

The buildings are all well planned and substantially built. The house almost new, 28 by 28, with a basement. The horse barn is 24 by 36 by 14. There are two large cattle barns, combination crib and granary, two hog houses with pens and alleys, a double garage, two windmills and two large hen houses. With a half section of land and this equipment, I'll venture to say that Pete doesn't intend to live in a trailer for some time to come.
