

THE REAL DANGER
I believe too many of us are worried about the priggish spending of the Roosevelt administration. The thing which turns the World-Herald and other strong democratic sheets against the administration—the thing which caused forty of the leading demagogues of the nation to meet in Detroit last Friday to devise means for defeating Roosevelt—the thing most to be feared in the political life of America today is the possibility of our democracy being stolen from us and a Dictatorial form of government substituted for it. Going into bankruptcy is deplorable, but losing our independence is far worse, and I believe as truly as I believe that the sun will rise tomorrow, that the threat hangs over America today.

The demand for hay has lessened perceptibly the past week, though the price remains the same. Good hay is quoted at $11 on the local market. A considerable quantity of rye and oats are being brought in and selling well. Rye is quoted at 80c and oats at 40c. Cream fluctuates from 33 to 35 cents, being the former figure most of the past week.

Revolution is Not Impossible

One remark frequently heard, in discussion of the deplorable situation in Spain is that such a thing would be impossible in the United States.

It is going a little too far to say, however, that revolution is impossible in the United States. For there are revolutions and revolutions. The temperament of the German people is generally regarded as somewhat stolid, yet in the ushering in of the Hitler regime, there can be no question that the Reich has had a revolution which is about as complete as anything of the kind that has happened anywhere in the past. There was no great amount of fighting or real warfare when Hitler took charge. He won in the general elections and then simply proceeded to take charge "under the constitution" and, step by step to nullify that constitution until today it seems decidedly archaic.

All revolutions are not accompanied with bloody fighting. Sometimes they are accomplished peacefully, and often so gradually that the people themselves may not wholly understand what is going on. The American people love their constitutional government and have a horror of civil strife. So if there is an over-throw of our government it will perhaps come before the people have realized it and after the horse has been stolen and the lock pried from the stable door.

There can be no question that business was being regimented under the Blue Eagle. There can be no question either as to the efforts of the Agricultural Administration to regiment the farmer, and to tax the user of the farmer's commodities to pay the bill. The supreme court fortunately held that they violated constitutional government as well. Consequently there must have been a revolution under way when these executive arms of the government were put into action. So it would seem that there can really be a revolution of government in the United States, although it cannot be peacefully successful until those who want to change our system, shall do something first about the supreme court.—Scottsbluff Republican.

The Holt County Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held in Atkinson on Thursday, September 3, 1936, beginning at 10 o'clock, with an all day meeting. Everybody interested is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. May Retained as Pastor

The fourth quarterly conference was held at the Methodist church last Monday evening with District Superintendent Rev. W. A. Albright. There was a good attendance and all of the reports were good and afforded a lot of encouragement. By a vote of the conference the pastor, Rev. A. J. May and wife were unanimously invited to return to the church for another year.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Trustees: W. P. Curtis, J. S. Ennis, Walter Young, H. L. Lindberg, H. B. Burch, C. W. Porter, L. G. Gillespie and Ted McElhanev.

Stewards: F. M. Reece, Rev. D. S. Conard, Archie Bowen, Orton Young, Mrs. Harold Lindberg, Mrs. Enard Leach, Charles Yarnell, Mrs. Esther Harris, Mrs. J. A. Naylor, Mrs. W. P. Curtis, Gertrude Conard.

a cut in the governor's suggested budget for the next two years. The board is guardian of more than 8,000 wards in 16 state institutions.

Just how the budget for the remainder of the board's fiscal year will be balanced is not yet known. Two years ago under similar conditions salaries were reduced.

Hail destroyed crops at the Lincoln institutions this spring, and at only three institutions where irrigation is practiced has anything been saved. Those three are the Kearney industrial school, Hastings state hospital and the Grand Island soldiers' home. At the latter two institutions pump irrigation is carried on extensively.

Members of the board intimate that the food situation at the various institutions may present a serious problem in view of the destruction of crops and the rising food prices.

Nebraska's finances, so far as the state government is concerned, are looking up, what with the cash balance in the treasury increasing $1,381,000 during the first three weeks of August. The total last week was $9,627,000.

State Treasurer Hall said that the balance should go down in the next four months with the state spending more than $22,000,000 a year.

The state board of educational lands and funds recently authorized the purchase of $300,000 worth of U. S. government bonds bearing 2.75 per cent interest and obtainable on the present market at a yield of 2.61 per cent.

The state's trust fund investments now total $13,644,036. Only 1.8 per cent of this amount, or $256,485, is delinquent, and if irrigation and drainage district obligations owned by the various trust funds were eliminated, the percentage of delinquency would be only .8 of one per cent, according to the state treasurer who claims this is a remarkable showing.

Nebraska's old age pensioners have been dying at the rate of about four a day since the old age assistance program got under way last spring. More than 500 have died since that time, but there are still more than 21,000 on the lists. There are more than 2,500 applications for old age pensions waiting consideration, and Director Tolon believes the 25,000 mark will be reached.

A BETTER RURAL STATUS

Hon. Robert G. Simmons, republican candidate for the United States senate, presents an idea which, at first glance, might appear to be doubtful. Potentially it might seem discriminatory in essence. However, upon closer analysis, it will be declared economically and politically sound, as well as timely. He would, when it becomes necessary for the purpose of retaining parity for the agricultural industry, apply the payment of benefits, as provided for in the republican national platform, "to the operation of the family-sized farm only, and not to large corporation operators." The economical element in this proposal is the employment of more men and the greater permanency of individually owned and operated farms. The improvement of rural living conditions is universally deemed necessary. Individual farm homes, permanently owned and operated, are the essence, the without-which-not, of rural life. Politically it is sound—the farmers of the nation, individual owners and operators, have always been a stabilizing factor in governmental affairs. Mr. Simmons' thought along this line is only one more very good reason why Nebraska should elect him to succeed Senator Norris.—Grand Island Republican.

TRUE TO FORM.

It must be admitted that the state administration has run true to the national democratic form. The appropriations for the biennium are the largest in the history of the state and seventeen new boards and commissions are said to have been created in the last year. The democrats, however, claim that no new taxes have been added, but the consolatory effect of this contention disappears when one sits down to figure up the total amount of his old taxes. A new tax, as we understand it, is one that nobody else thought of before.—Lincoln Journal.
