back of your head. That too might

The girl had got to her feet and "I really feel all right now." She Siefert spoke gruffly. "A few more minutes of that bromin gas would have proved fatal. Whoever found you and got you out here

"How did you happen to find me

"Belated reasoning," he answered. "I should have found you several minutes before-the mo-

It Was Part of a Broken Vial.

ment I learned that you had not

"I can't understand it even now."

"Neither can I - entirely," rethe girl said with a bewildered air.

turned Vance. "But perhaps I can

Going quickly to a pitcher of water Heath had brought, he dipped the handkerchief against his face, label on which was printed the sym-

"I found this on the tiled floor, which holds Professor Garden's as-to the floor accidentally. It could only have been taken out deliberately and broken at the right moment." He handed the fragment of "Take this, Sergeant, and have prints. But if, as I suspect, the same person that killed Swift hanmore." She was leaning against one "Of course," she returned in a low the hallway at this moment. He hall?" he asked. "It's gotten down-

"Not now. No." Vance returned.

"A little bromin gas a few minutes ago; but the air will be clear in a little while. No casualties. Every "Awfully sorry to interrupt you,

Vance; but the fact is, I came for the doctor." His eyes rested on Siefert, and he smiled dryly. "It's the usual thing, doc," he said. "The hadn't an ounce of strength left."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Claw and Ball Foot Furniture

ceeded the club foot as a terminal on the roof with a puzzled air.

stairs. Is anything wrong?"

"Then we'll carry on, what?"

learn something more."

inches long.

bol "Br."

glass to Heath.

flashing.

coughed.

to see me?"

end of the settee.

looked at Vance wistfully. "And I have you to thank-haven't I?"

did so just in time."

so soon?" she asked him.

stood swaying a little as she stead-

S.S. VAN DINE

COPYRIGHT W.N.U. SERVICE S.S. VAN DINE

CHAPTER IX-Continued -11-

A change came over the girl. She relaxed, as if from a sudden attack of weakness. She did not take her eyes from Vance, and appeared | ment and frowned. to be appraising him and deciding what course to follow.

tweed top-coat over his arm. He sage?" cocked an eyebrow at Vance and nodded triumphantly.

"I take it, Sergeant," Vance cessful. You may speak out." He plained: "Sergeant Heath has been searching for the gun that fired the second shot."

The girl became suddenly animated and leaned forward attentive-

"After going over the roof and the stairs and the hall of the apartment, hanging in the hall closet," said ever since Doc Siefert arrived." Heath. "The gun was in the pocket of this." He threw the coat on the davenport and took a .38 gun-metal revolver from his pocket. He broke it and showed it to Vance and Markham. "Full of blanks-and one of 'em has been discharged."

"Very good, Sergeant," Vance complimented him. "Whose coat is this, by the by?"

"I don't know yet, Mr. Vance; but time. I'm going to find out pronto." Zalia Graem had risen and come forward. "I can tell you whose coat that is," she said. "It belongs to Miss Beeton, the nurse. I saw her wearing it yesterday." "Thanks awfully for the identification," returned Vance, his eyes resting dreamily on her.

She focused her gaze on Vance again. "Lemmy Merhorsy aristocracy that infests our eyelids that he was disturbed. eastern seaboard, asked me to drive out to Sands Point with him for the polo game tomorrow. I thought I might dig up some more exciting engagement and told him to call me here this afternoon at half-past three for a final yes or no. I purposely stipulated that time, so I wouldn't miss the running of the Handicap. As you know, he didn't call till after four, with excuses about not having been able to get to a telephone. I tried to get rid of him in a hurry, but he was persistent - the only virtue he possesses, so far as I know. I left him dangling on the wire when I came out to listen to the race, and then went back for a farewell and havea-nice-time-without-me. Just as I hung up I heard what sounded like almost passed out when I saw him. I don't like it . . ." He got up That's everything."

Vance rose and bowed.

"Thanks for your ultimate candor, Miss Graem. I'm deuced sorry I had to torture you to obtain it. And please ignore the nightmares you accused me of manufacturing."

The girl frowned as her intense gaze rested on Vance.

"I wonder if you don't really know more about this affair than you pretend."

"My dear Miss Graem! I do not pretend to know anything about it." Vance went to the door and held it open for her. "You may go now, but we shall probably want to see you again tomorrow, and I just ask for your promise that you will stay at home where you will be available."

"Don't worry,-I'll be at home." As she went out, Miss Beeton was coming up the passageway toward the study. The two women passed each other without speaking. "I'm sorry to trouble you, Mr. Vance," the nurse apologized, "but Doctor Siefert has just arrived and and asked me to inform you that he wished very much to see you as soon as possible. Mr. Garden," she added, "has told him about Mr.

Swift's death." At the moment her gaze fell on the tweed coat, and a slight puzzled slowly and took out another cigarfrown lined her forehead. Before ette. "She's not the kind of girl that vault where Swift was shot. We were she could speak Vance said:

"The sergeant brought your coat up here. He didn't know whose it a very good reason.' was. We were looking for something." Then he added quickly: "Please tell Doctor Siefert that I enough to come here to the study."

CHAPTER X

ing for a summons.

"Sorry, Vance," Garden apologized, "but Doc Siefert is downstairs and says he'd like to see you, if convenient, before he goes." Vance looked at the man a mo-

"Miss Beeton informed me of the fact a few minutes ago. I asked Before she managed to speak her to tell the doctor I would be Heath stamped up the passageway glad to see him at once. I can't and opened the study door. He car- understand his sending you also. ried a woman's black-and-white Didn't the nurse give him the mes-

"I'm afraid not. I know Siefert sent Miss Beeton up here, and I assumed, as I imagine Siefert did, drawled, "your quest has been suc- that you had detained her." He looked round the room with a puzturned to Zalia Graem and ex- zled expression. "The fact, is I thought she was still up here."

"You mean she hasn't returned downstairs?" Vance asked.

"No, she hasn't come down yet." Vance took a step forward.

"Are you sure of that, Garden?" "Yes, very sure." Garden nodded vigorously. "I've been in the I thought I'd look through the wraps | front hall, near the foot of the stairs,

"Did you see any of the others come down?"

"Why, yes," Garden told him. 'Kroon came down and went out. And then Madge Weatherby. And shortly after the nurse had gone up with Siefert's message to you, Zalia came down and hurried away. But that's all. And, as I say, I've been down there in the front hall all the

"What about Hammle?" "Hammle? No, I haven't seen anything of him. I thought he was still here with you." "That's deuced queer." Vance moved slowly to a chair and sat down with a perplexed frown. "It's possible you missed him. However, it doesn't matter. Ask the doctor to come up, will you?"

When Garden had left us Vance sat smoking and staring at the ceilrit, one of the various scions of the ing. I knew from the droop of his > again. "For Heaven's sake. Vance."

Markham commented irritably. "It's entirely possible Garden wasn't watching the stairs as closely as he imagines."

"Yes. Oh, yes." Vance nodded vaguely. "Everyone worried. None the hall itself isn't very spacious

"It's quite possible Hammle went down the main stairs from the terrace, wishing, perhaps, to avoid the others."

"He hadn't his hat up here with him," Vance returned without looka shot and came to the door, to find ing up. "He would have had to enter everyone hurrying along the hall, the front hall and pass Garden to An idea went through my head that get it. No point in such silly mamaybe Woody had shot himself- neuvers . . . But it isn't Hammle that's why I went mid-Victorian and I'm thinking of. It's Miss Beeton.

I Heard What Sounded Like a Shot.

to Siefert immediately, unless for it yourself."

"A number of things might have happened-"

"Yes, of course. That's just it. will be very glad to see him at once. Too many things have happened And ask him if he will be good here today already." Vance went to the north window and looked out Miss Beeton nodded and went out. into the garden. Then he returned "As you say, Markham." His voice There was a soft knock, and was barely audible. "Something that I was unaware of anything or called the Transition period of the Vance turned from the window. He may have happened. . . ." Sud- anybody around me. Then I felt early Georgian era, which continued was confronted by Garden, who had denly he threw his cigarette into myself being caught from behind, through the early work of Chippenopened the study door without wait- an ash tray and turned on his heel. turned about, and forced back up dale to the beginning of the reign Sergeant. We'll have to make a I have a faint recollection of the search-immediately."

He opened the door quickly and I wasn't sufficiently rational to prostarted down the hall. We followed test or even to realize what had him with vague apprehension, not happened. But I was conscious of knowing what was on his mind and with no anticipation of what was was a frightful suffocating smell." to follow. Vance peered out through the garden door. Then he turned worse." Vance spoke in a low voice back, shaking his head.

"No, it couldn't have been there. We would have been able to see." His eyes moved inquiringly up and down the hall, and after a moment have been worse, but the starched a strange, startled look came into band of your cap probably saved them. "It could be!" he exclaimed. you from more serious injury." "Oh, my aunt! Damnable things are happening here. Wait a second."

He rapidly retraced his steps to ied herself against Vance. the vault door. Grasping the knob, he rattled it violently; but the door was now locked. Taking the key from its nail, he inserted it hurriedly into the lock. As he opened the heavy door a crack, a pungent, penetrating odor assailed my nostrils. Vance quickly drew back.

"Out into the air!" he called over The girl had not taken her eyes his shoulder, in our direction. "All from Vance. of you!"

Instinctively we made for the door to the garden.

Vance held one hand over his nose and mouth and pushed the vault door further inward. Heavy ambercolored fumes drifted out into the hall, and I felt a stifling, choking sensation. Vance staggered back a step, but kept his hand on the door-

"Miss Beeton! Miss Beeton!" he called. There was no response and I saw Vance put his head down and move forward into the dense fumes that were emanating from the open door. He sank to his knees on the threshold and leaned forward into the vault. The next moment he had straightened up and was dragging the limp body of the nurse out into the passageway. As soon as the girl was out of the vault, Vance took her up in his arms and carried her unsteadily out into the garden, where he placed her gently on the wicker settee. His face was deathly pale; his eyes were watering; and he had difficulty with his breathing. When he had released the girl, he leaned heavily against one of the iron posts which supported the awning. He opened his mouth wide and sucked the fresh air into his lungs.

The nurse was gasping stertorously and clutching her throat. Although her breast was rising and falling convulsively, her whole body was limp and lifeless.

At that moment Doctor Siefert stepped through the garden door, a returned downstairs. But at first it had all the outward appearance of serious could have happened to the type of medical man Vance had you." described to us the night before. He was about sixty, conservatively but modishly attired, and with a bearing studiously dignified and self-sufficient. With a great effort Vance drew himself erect.

"Hurry, doctor," he called. "It's bromin gas."

Siefert came rapidly forward, he disappeared into the passageway. moved the girl's body into a more A minute or so later he returned. In comfortable position and opened the collar of her uniform.

"Nothing but the air can help her," he said, as he moved one end on the alert. Normal mechanisms of the settee around so that it faced not functioning. Still, the stairs are the cool breeze from the rivvisible half way up the hall, and er. "How are you feeling, Vance?" Vance was dabbing his eyes with a handkerchief. He blinked once or twice and smiled faintly. "I'm quite all right." He went to the settee and looked down at the he murmured.

girl for a moment. "A close call," Siefert inclined his head gravely. At this moment Hammle came strutting up briskly from a remote corner of the garden. "Good God!" he exclaimed. 'What's the matter?"

Vance turned to the man in angry

"Well, well," he greeted him.

tell you later what's the matter. telltale marks on it. However . . . Or perhaps you will be able to tell me. Wait over there." And he jerked his head in the direction of a chair nearby.

to Long Island," Hammle muttered. | feeling now, Miss Beeton?" "It might have been better, don't y'know," murmured Vance, turning away from him.

The nurse's strangled coughing had abated somewhat. Her breathing was deeper and more regular, and the gasping had partly subsided. Before long she struggled to sit up.

Siefert helped her. "Breathe as deeply and rapidly as you can," he said. "It's air you need."

The girl made an effort to follow instructions, one hand braced against the back of the settee, and the other resting on Vance's arm. A few minutes later she was able to speak, but with considerable difficulty. "I feel-better now. Except for the burning - in my nose and throat."

"What happened?" she asked. "We don't know yet." Vance returned her gaze with obvious distress. "We only know that you were poisoned with bromin gas in the would neglect taking my message hoping that you could tell us about collapse—she assured me that she

She shook her head vaguely, and there was a dazed look in her eyes.

"I'm afraid I can't tell you very much. It all happened so unexpectedly-so suddenly. All I know is that when I went to tell Doctor a dragon's claw holding a ball or Siefert he might come upstairs, I pearl which was frequently found was struck on the head from behind, on early Chinese bronzes. It sucto the center of the room and stood just as I passed the garden door. for a moment in tense meditation. The blow didn't render me entirely in English furniture, its greatest unconscious, but it stunned me so decorative use being in what was "Oh, my word! I wonder . . . Come the passageway and into the vault. of George III.

door being shut upon me, although the fact that inside the vault there

"Yes. Not a pleasant experience. But it could have been much SPROUTED OATS GOOD WINTER DIET and smiled gravely down at the girl. "There's a bad bruise on the > Tender Plants Should Be Free From Mold.

> By J. C. Taylor, Extension Poultryman, New Jersey College of Agriculture. WNU Service.

Green food for winter feeding of poultry can easily be obtained by sprouting oats. Oats to be sprouted should be good seed oats and free from any must or smut, and a homemade oat sprouter, consisting of trays two feet square and four or five inches deep with fine hardware cloth for the bottom, is satisfactory equipment.

Soak the oats in warm water overnight and then spread them on the trays about an inch thick. Keep the temperature of the room in which the oats are placed between 60 and 70 degrees Fahrenheit and water the oats once a day. When the sprouts are three or four inches long, they are ready to be fed to the birds at the rate of one square inch of oats to each bird daily.

The most serious trouble in sprouting is mold. Great care is needed to avoid its appearance and no oats should be fed which have any trace of mold. Careful washing of trays and tubs used in sprouting oats in a five per cent solution of formalin is a good practice to follow. If this fails to control the mold, use one teaspoon of formalin to every six quarts of water and allow the oats to soak in this solution for 12

Houdans a French Breed, Takes Name From Village

The Houdan is a French breed, taking its name from the village of Houdan. It is a rather popular breed in France and is kept to a certain extent in the United States for the production of table poultry. It is a bird of good substance with good length and depth of body, making it well adapted for the production of meat. The back is long and of good breadth, sloping slightly toward the tail. In many respects the Houdan somewhat resembles look of amazement on his face. He was difficult to realize that anything the Dorking, an English breed. The standard weights in pounds are: Cock, 7; hen, 61/2; cockerel, 61/2; and pullet, 5.

A characteristic feature of the Houdan is the presence of a fifth varieties of chickens having but a neat, circular bundle he saw a four toes. The Houdan also has a well-developed crest and a beard. his handkerchief into it. Pressing The comb is V shaped.

plumage with about 1 feather in 2 his hand he held a jagged piece of to 1 feather in 10 tipped with posithin curved glass, about three tive white, depending on the section of plumage. The fluff is black, It was part of a broken vial, and tipped with gray. The under-color still clinging to it was a small paper in all sections of both sexes is dull black. The ear lobes are white. The color of the beak is dark horn; the shanks and toes are pinkish in the far corner of the vault. It white, mottled with black. was just beneath one of the racks

The White Houdan is the counterpart of the mottled in type and sortment of chemicals. There's an has pure white plumage. The ear empty space in the rack, but this lobes are red. The beak, shanks, vial of bromin couldn't have fallen and toes are pinkish white.

Problems of Disease

With the increase in poultry population, and local concentration, have come problems of diseaseit gone over carefully for finger- plenty of them. Some of the experiment stations, notes a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, in states where "The roll call is complete. I'll dled it, I doubt if there will be any poultry is a large industry have research laboratories comparable to "This was a dastardly thing, those of the great hospitals. Germ Vance," Siefert burst out, his eyes and parasite infestation, bodily defects, nutritional deficiencies and "Yes. All of that, doctor. So was disorders are studied to find the ex-"I wish I'd taken the earlier train Swift's murder . . . How are you act causes, so that prevention, vaccination or medical treatment may "A little shaky," she answered be recommended. Easily adminiswith a weak smile. "But nothing tered capsules are available for many poultry troubles, such as intestinal parasites. We all realize that disease prevention through sanitary measures is of prime importance, but many poultry disorders Floyd Garden stepped out from do yield to modern treatment so that it is not necessary to chop off a hen's head at the first sign of ail-"What's this beastly odor in the ment.

Hatching Eggs

When we hatch eggs from a pullet, not much can be known about her ability to live. If, on the othone doing well . . . Did you want er hand, eggs from her are hatched when she is two or three years old, Garden looked round at the group she has then demonstrated her ability to endure heavy laying and to resist disease and adequately assimilate large amounts of feed. Regardless of the cause of the high mortality, it would seem logimater seems almost in a state of

Loss From Red Mites

Red mites and body lice frequently cause serious loss in egg produc-Claw and ball foot furniture origtion. Deaths also may follow a bad inated from the Oriental design of infestation among both young and old stock, and considerable time and care may be required to bring the flock back into condition after the trouble has been overcome. Carelessness or insanitary conditions are usually responsible for the presence of these pests. They thrive on dirty hens and multiply rapidly in filth if it is allowed to accumulate in the henhouse

The Sun Rises

By WILLIAM R. GRECO McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

E ENTERED the room and closed the door behind him. For a moment he leaned heavily against the door. Outside the sounds of the jubilant crowds drifted dimly to his ears. He shook his head as if to rid his brain of the noise and turmoil.

Dragging his big body across the room, he sank into an easy chair. He covered his face with his hands. still red from the Arctic ice and wind. His head ached from thinking. All that long trip he had spent torturing his mind in vain efforts to drive the mist from his brain.

When he had received word of his wife's death, he seemed to lose the power to think clearly. All he could say over and over again, was: 'Binnie's dead . . . Binnie's dead."

He dug the palms of his hands deep into his eyes. "It's going to be hard, Binnie."

The door to his room opened quietly. His head came up slowly, wearily, and he saw that it was Effie, the housekeeper. Her thin voice came softly. "I'm so sorry, Mr. Caffrey." Caffrey stared at the blurred wall before him. "There's something I must know, Effie," he said, his voice hoarse and tired. "Yes, sir?" His brown eyes, dark with suffering, bored into those of the housekeeper. "Could I have . . . if in some way I had managed to The housekeeper shook her head. 'Oh, no, sir. There wasn't time for that. Besides, she wouldn't hear of it. She was so happy that you had been chosen to go on the expedition. She wanted you to finish your job. And all the while, sir, she knew.'

'How was it, Effie? I mean-" "I know, sir," Effie said. "It was beautiful, sir, and peaceful. She seemed so gay those last few days planning a surprise for you. It's in the bedroom.'

He lapsed into silence. Then:

"You've explained to Junior?" The old eyes of the housekeeper moistened. "As best you can tell little fellow like him, sir."

He nodded. "I know, Effie. You can go now. And thanks-for everything. You've been kind." Steeling himself, he entered the room—their room—Binnie's and his. He looked about. Everything was in order. Beside the bed he saw a phonograph machine. Binnie had toe, practically all other breeds and loved music. On the dresser, tied in package. His heart gave a queer jerk as he grasped it eagerly. He struggled with the cord. A phono-The Mottled Houdan has black graph record rolled out of his hands, onto the bed. His breath came in swift gasps as he leaned over the > pectantly. "Hello, Bill." The voice came low, natural-Binnie's voice. For a crazy moment his whole body racked with renewed agony. He called softly: "Binnie... Binnie."

> machine, fumbled a moment with the mechanisms, then waited, ex-

"Listen Bill," Binnie's voice said, softly. "I'm so sorry, dear, I couldn't be there to greet you. You're a hero now, aren't you, my Bill? I know you will have something to say, so now and then I'll pause and let you talk to me. I'll hear you, Bill."

Caffrey sat stiff and silent on the bed's edge. Then the voice came again. "Dear Bill, I know how you must feel. But I had to say good-by to you.' All the loneliness left him as he listened. Binnie was talking to him-Binnie!

Again the voice: "Perhaps you wonder why I'm repeating your name so often. It's been a long time since I've talked to you. I want to say it over and over. Just Bill . . Bill. I-'

Her voice stopped short in a choked cry. Caffrey clenched his fists. "Binnie!"

"I'm so sorry, Bill," her voice continued. "A little pain. So sorry. But honestly, Bill, it wasn't much of a pain. There never has been very much pain except when I thought of you and Junior."

There was a silence. When her was quieter, lacking the brave levity of tone she had assumed. "Now, Bill, before I go . . when this is over . . . when I stop talking . . . promise me you'll break the record." Caffrey was silent a moment. "I can't Binnie, I can't," he said. Miraculously, but then Binnie knew him so well, her voice said: "Oh, Bill, promise. You see, if you didn't break the record, then it would only mean suffering every cal to breed more from hens time you listened to me. I don't that have lived long and produced want to keep coming back to you. It isn't fair to you or Junior to keep me, even on a record. Promise, Bill."

He didn't say anything. He waited for Binnie to speak. She said: "Good-by, Bill dear. Good-by."

And that was all. His body loosened; his hands lay opened and nerveless in his lap. He reached out a hand and picked up the record. For a brief moment he held it in his hands, carefully. Then, deliberately, he let it drop to the hardwood floor. He stared, his face grave and motionless, at the broken

Then he arose and went to his son.

Striking Wild Rose Design in Cutwork

Pattern 1337

Simplicity of design-simplicity of needlework combine to make these wild roses effective in cutwork. Do the flowers in applique, too - it's very easy to combine with cutwork. Use these designs on sheets and pillow cases - on scarfs and towels - on a chair back. Dress up your own home or make them as gifts. Pattern 1337 contains a transfer pattern of a motif 61/2 by 20 inches, two motifs 5 by 1434 incnes and pattern pieces for the applique patches; illustrations of all stitches used; material requirements; color suggestions.

Send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) for this pattern to The Sewing Circle Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Ave, New York.

Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Ask Me Another

A General Ouiz @ Bell Syndicate.-WNU Service.

1. What is an incantation?

What is an antitoxin? 3. On what island was the labyrinth of the Minataur?

4. What is a locomotive's pilot sometimes called? 5. Does Holy week come before or after Easter? 6. Is Japan north or south of the Philippines?

7. What does "irascible" mean? 8. Who was the first emperor of modern Germany?

9. What was the latest territorial acquisition of the United States? 10. Who wrote "Old Wives'

Answers

1. A formula for magical words. 2. A substance neutralizing poi-

Crete.

The cow-catcher.

Before. North.

7. Prone to anger.

Wilhelm I. 9. The Virgin Islands (bought from Denmark). 10. Arnold Bennett.

Why suffer with muscular pains of rhet neuralgia, lumbago, or chest cold? Thousands say Hamlins Wizard Oil brings quick relief to aching legs, arms, chest, neck, back. Just rub is on—rub it in. Makes the skin glow with warmtl —muscles feel soothed—relief comes quick Pleasant odor. Will not stain clothes. At al

HAMLINS WIZARD OIL For MUSCULAR ACHES and PAINS Due to RKEUMATISM-NEURALGIA LUMBAGO CHEST COLDS

DAN-D-FORD V-8 PICK UP 1/2 TON OVERLOAD SPRING

voice did come he noticed that it DAN'S SPRING WORKS, INC., (Est. 1926)

1810-14 Cherry St. Kansas City, M

HEARTBURN?

Its surprising how many have heart burn. Hurried eating, overeating, heavy smoking, excessive drinking all lead to heartburn. When it comes, heed the warning. Your stomach is on a strike,

TAKE MILNESIAS

Milnesia, the original milk of magnesia in wafer form, taken after indulgence, relieves heartburn. Crunchy and tasty. Each wafer equals 4 teaspoonfuls milk of magnesia. 20c, 35c & 60c packages.