 The handcraft club spent Thursday evening working on book ends made from ply wood cardboard and crepe paper. The outline is cut from the ply wood and a raised design is made by pasting heavy cardboard onto the wood. This is then covered with paste and brown crepe paper is stretched and pressed over the design. When completed and varnished is has the appearance of carved wood. This is only one of many attractive and useful articles that can be made from scraps. The new members of the Club are Doris Scofield, Delores Bachman and Donna Marcellus.
