CONGRESS AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN Senate to Act on Court Proposals First

Members have had word that their judiciary committee will not act on the President's bill to change the Supreme Court until the senate judiciary committee has acted. This indicates the house will not get the bill until the battle clears up in the senate. In the meantime members on the house side are trying to reply to thousands of letters from constituents bearing on the court question. Practically all of the letters have opined the president's plan but members are informed that the administration letters favoring the plan will now start coming in. In this way many members believe the entire thing is being tried in "the court of public opinion" and by the time all of the speeches have been made—all of the editorials read, most of the letters will have arrived and members will have their choice on a record vote. A poll of the senate has been made on the court question, but no such poll has been made in the house. Both democratic and republican members are daily grouped in these discussions—all of which indicates that this will be the most serious piece of legislation coming before this congress. By present indications it will be many weeks before the house membership will get the legislation and with many other new proposals from the White House which include the reorganization of government departments, the first session of the seventy-fifth congress will be in session into August or September. Very little has been done except the appropriation of money for regular departments since congress convened in January.
