ALL IS NOT QUITE WELL
 In spite of the fact that business is getting better all over the world, it is evident that there are some things to be ironed out in the United States even yet. During the 1936 campaign the New Dealers based their campaign on the assertion that their policies had restored business. This was the theme of all speakers from President Roosevelt on down. In vain republican and Jeffersonian democratic orators hammered away on the Constitution and the preservation of our fundamental institutions. Senator Reed of Missouri even hurled the charge that an effort would be made after the election to enlarge the Supreme Court in the interests of New Deal legislation like the NRA and the AAA.

All such contentions and charges were dismissed by the New Dealers as foolish and absurd.

But now it becomes apparent that things are not quite right. All over the country we have been treated to the un-American sit-down strike. The cost of living has risen rapidly for various reasons. The workers have demanded higher wages. When higher wages have been granted the price of the commodities affected has risen, further increasing the cost of living to all consumers, including the victorious strikers. It has become a spiral of inflation in exact reverse to the vicious spiral of deflation we had during the depression.

Further indications that things are not yet right include the failure of the income tax collections in March to come up to expectations by $150,000,000, the prophecy that Uncle Sam will have to borrow money to meet his running expenses before the end of the fiscal year June 30, and the sag in the government bond market which has necessitated Uncle Sam's going into the market to support his own securities.

The unrest has spread to congress. We hear of the organization of a bloc which will demand the curtailment of expenditures and will frown on any increase in taxes. Then we get word of another bloc which will demand bigger and bigger appropriations for relief, with the borrowing of the money if necessary. This intumescence would bring about more inflation and a higher cost of living, calling for still higher wages and more relief.

The promise of budget balancing anywhere in the near future without tax increase seems to have gone glimmering. Instead of less expenditure, the only sure means to a balanced budget, we have had greater expenditure. During the first three months of the present year it is true that federal revenues increased nearly $85,000,000 a month. But it is unfortunately also true that in the same time the government has increased its national budget deficit by nearly $116,000,000.

Just where this will bring us eventually the Lord only knows. It would seem that sooner or later we will face running on the reef of real inflation and the disasters which are bound to follow. But then of course the people voted for it everywhere—except in Maine and Vermont.

VETO POWER

When the President talks about the "veto" on legislation "assumed" by the Supreme Court, we are at a loss to know precisely what he means. The President has a veto on legislation, and in our simplicity we always thought that he alone had it. It is quite possible, of course, that what the President really means is not "veto" but "judicial review," which is a wholly different power. But since that power is inherent in the nature of the federal judiciary, it is not "assumed." Without it, there could be no Supreme Court.—America.

TAXING THE RICH

When you hear a politician re-echoing high-sounding phrases about taxing the rich or taking from the rich their surplus profits, you are listening to a demagogue who is talking for effect and who knows that the result he advocates has never been, and never will be, attained. It is the common people who pay, have always paid and always will pay.—Britton, South Dakota, Journal.
