The BABY who was born TOMORROW

A child was born in Australia on March 13th. Its grandparents in America heard the news by telephone on March 12th, because of the difference in time.

That is an extreme example of the way the telephone annihilates time and distance. Yet every day thousands of far-seeing and "far-hearing" persons accomplish things by telephone that otherwise might take them days.

So whether there is a baby to announce or pressing business to transact, reach for the telephone.

To live like a prince means too often to die like a pauper. Then what becomes of wife and children?
