THE NEBRASKA SCENE

No action was taken by the state pardon board at its meeting last week on the application for hearing of Paul Wupper, former banker of Beemer, who is serving a sentence of 110 years for misappropriation of funds. Wupper's name is not included on the list of prisoners whose cases were recommended for hearing at the October meeting of the board, which is composed of the following members: Governor R. L. Cochran, Attorney General Richard C. Hunter, and Secretary of State Harry R. Swanson.

Thousands of the visitors to the state fair have seized the opportunity to visit the state capitol, and a constant stream of visitors has moved thru the building all week. An extra force of guides has been employed by Leo Swanson, capitol custodian, and the entire force of janitors has been kept busy, working in half-day shifts in taking care of the crowds. Several hundred persons were waiting for admission when the doors opened at 8 o'clock Monday morning, and each day the number has increased.

An Illinois couple who have kept company for thirty years got tired of seeing so much of one another and decided to get married.
