Nebraska. SANITARY BOARD MAKE RULE
Farmers to Be Allowed to Inoculate Stock with Serum.
LONG CONTEST COMES TO AN END
State Veterinarian Required to Have Notice of Sale of All Biological Product, to End that Check May Be Kept on It.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)
LINCOLN, Jan. 15.—(Special.)—The appointment of five qualified veterinarians to look after the health of stock and the proper observance of the rules governing the sale and use of biological products was advocated in rules adopted by the State Live Stock Sanitary board at its meeting this afternoon.

The rules were prepared by a committee representing all interests of the state interested in live stock and were adopted by the board without opposition.

The rule which caused the controversy which resulted in the calling of the meeting, was satisfactorily fixed so that farmers may inoculate their own stock and assist their neighbors.

The sale of all biological products shall be required to have notice sent to the state veterinarian, who shall keep a record of the same and to whom sold.

At the close of the meeting Governor Morehead delivered an address.

Crocker Stirs Things Up.
Failure of F. C. Crocker of Filley, a member of the State Live Stock Sanitary board, to understand the pen and ink additions to typewritten so-called rules passed by the state veterinarians at their recent meeting in Lincoln, and also failure to understand that members of the board to which he belongs had invited the veterinarians to incorporate rules to be considered by the board, was shown to be the cause of the recent ill feeling between the farmers of the state and the state veterinarians, at a meeting held at the Lindell hotel last night.

Crocker, soon after the meeting of the veterinarians and the adoption of the rules at that meeting, was interviewed in the various farm journals of the state assailing the organization of state veterinarians as a trust and charging them with attempting to force the State Sanitary board to adopt rules which deprived the farmers of the state of a right to use hog cholera serum themselves on their own stock and also charging that the veterinarians were trying to control the channels through which it was to be sold to the interests of the veterinarians themselves.

Failed to Understand.
In the meeting last night, which had been called for the purpose of fixing up a set of rules to be presented at the meeting of the Live Stock Sanitary board this afternoon, Mr. Crocker admitted that he failed to comprehend that the interrelations were a part of the rules passed by the veterinarians and that if they were a part of the rules it practically settled the controversy as to the intention of the veterinarians regarding the right of farmers to use hog cholera serum on their own stock.

Dr. Anderson of the State Board of Veterinarians read the rule governing the sale of serum and explained that it only related to producers of serum when it required that a registered veterinarian should have charge of the putting out of the stuff.

J. H. Bulla of South Omaha, chairman of the state live stock sanitary board, then explained that it was an invitation of the board that the meeting of state veterinarians had prepared the rules for submission to the board.

"We were all to a certain extent a little green as just the sort of rules we ought to adopt," said Mr. Bulla, "and so we asked the veterinarians to get up a set of rules, which we might use as a sort of foundation to start with. We knew that they understood the business and would be able to get us started. The rules were not intended to be adopted as passed by the veterinarians but only as a sort of starter in the work."

Come to Agreement.
As soon as those gathered at the meeting saw that there had been no intention on the part of the veterinarians of the state to force upon the board a set of rules and that they had been invited by the board to prepare the rules, the meeting changed to a love feast and a general discussion was had, in which farmers, veterinarians, manufacturers of serum, representatives of farm papers and members of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board took part. Attempted to get together on some sort of a program which would bring about a condition regarding the use of serum, which would

Nebraska. FUNDS DIVERTED BY JEFFERSON SCHOOL TREASURER
FAIRBURY, Neb., Jan. 15.—(Special.)—As a result of a Jefferson county teacher incidentally making the assertion that she cashed her pay check at a bank in Fairbury, an investigation was made of the school funds of district No. 4, six miles northeast of Jansen in this county, and it was found that a diversion of $1,200 of money by the treasurer of that district, John W. Bevans.

H. J. Kuester, director of the same district, found that approximately $700 in teachers' warrants had been cashed at the Harbine bank and were drawing 7 per cent interest, together with accrued interest. He also found that the Goodrich banking firm had $500 in teachers' warrants against district No. 4, making an aggregate amount of $1,200.

It appeared that Bevans, treasurer of the district, had advised the teachers in his district to come to Fairbury and have their warrants cashed at the Harbine and Goodrich banks, and for three years used the school funds for his own private use.

Bevans has been critically ill for several weeks past and is not expected to live. However, he is somewhat improved, and has agreed to sell his eighty-acre farm northeast of Jansen to avert being prosecuted.

Lumbermen Hold Annual Session
(From a Staff Correspondent.)
LINCOLN, Jan. 15.—(Special.)—State lumbermen are meeting in Lincoln at the Lincoln hotel, about 500 of them being present.

The convention is presided over by F. A. Good of Cowles, vice-W. H. Harrison, lately deceased. He endorsed the currency law in his opening address, but thought that it would need quite a lot of fixing before it would be workable. He deplored the action of the house in cutting out the quarantine feature of the bill.

Secretary E. E. Hall mentioned in his report the action of the government in the suits against corporations in the east and also in the northwest. He spoke of drastic laws which had been passed in Missouri which would result in much loss of business. They have been made against so-called combinations in restraint of trade and would result unfavorably to the business interests of the state.

The members were made happy when the financial report showed that of the $2,531 paid in during the year, there was enough left to buy a dozen eggs and a bundle of shingles, over $615 being in the treasury.

Today the young men of the association had the floor, one of the features being a series of moving pictures showing the lumber industry from the time the trees are cut till the finished product is loaded on the cars.

The addresses were by E. C. Hole, managing editor of the American Lumberman, Chicago; J. A. Joseph, assistant editor Retail Lumberman, Kansas City; Mr. Treishmann of the Srossett Lumber company, Crossett, Ark.

Tonight the big banquet of the "Ho-Ho," the national organization of the lumber dealers, was held, the menu consisting of splinters, cedar posts and old bills.

The Old Line Bankers Life Insurance Co., Lincoln, Neb.
Gentlemen:
I am very glad to acknowledge receipt of your draft handed me by Jo H. Fowler, Agent of your Company, for $857.10, being in settlement of my policy No. 11696 on the ten payment Life plan, which is just matured. I took out this policy at the age of 51 years, and have enjoyed the protection of $1,000.00 insurance during the ten years, and now, at the advanced years of my life, I can say that nothing in the history of modern times records an instance more impressive than this sum of money coming to me at my declining years, which affords some conception of the untold amount of good being accomplished by the Old Line Bankers Life of Nebraska.

Being at this time 61 years old, this little investment looks mighty good to me, and should show to anyone how little an effort it is to take care of old age by laying aside a few dollars for a few years in a well managed Company.

Thanking you for courtesies extended and assuring you of our very best wishes for the Old Line Bankers Life Insurance Company.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH T. PHILLIPS.
