German Socialists Demonstrate Power in Business Affairs

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—The German capitalist's own artillery has been turned upon him by the socialists. The money interests have been awakened by the first encounter to the realization that the socialist resources are a factor in financial affairs.

The total funds of the unions are estimated at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000. But even this sum is only a minor item in the capital accumulations of the workmen.

Their co-operative stores and buying societies represent a capital of about $40,000,000. Of the $1,000,000,000 accumulated in the reserves of the governmental insurance systems about 45 per cent has been contributed by the workers.

Two illustrations of the capitalistic aspect of the socialist unions have lately aroused much comment. These were loans made by socialist organizations to two municipalities, which were able to place bond issues with the socialists to much better advantage than with the ordinary banks.

Carelessness With Firearms is Serious Offense in Germany

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Anyone who handles a gun in Germany is held to more strict accountability than in America, as indicated by a recent court decision.

A member of a hunting party in Prussian Saxony asked permission of a comrade to examine his gun. The owner handed it over and while the man was examining it the gun was discharged, instantly killing a young woman standing nearby.

The owner of the gun was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, while the man who was handling the gun has to serve a six months' term. The court held that the owner was criminally negligent in not withdrawing the cartridge. The man who held the weapon was treated more leniently because he was an inexperienced hunter.

NEBRASKA APPLES SUPERIOR

Fruit Produced in Antelope State is of High Quality.

CALL FOR BIG APPLE IS PASSING

Northwestern Fruit Exchange, Published at Portland, Ore., Makes an Interesting Statement.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Jan. 17.—(Special)—A new item from the Northwestern Fruit Exchange, published at Portland, Ore., is of more than passing interest to the people of Nebraska, according to a statement made by Secretary J. R. Duncan of the Nebraska State Horticultural society. The Exchange says:

"Every day's trade in the apple market reflects the change in conditions from what has existed for Pacific northwest fruit during recent years. There is no discounting the fact that the demand for large-size apples is on the ebb and that medium size fruit is taking its place.

"While this condition might be most aggravated this season owing to the fact that apples are so high that the average consumer prefers to get more of the fruit to the box than formerly, still the very large apple has perhaps seen its best marketing day, except in years when very few of this size are available."

"The Northwestern Fruit Exchange," says Secretary Duncan, "handles the bulk of the fruit grown in the Pacific northwest, and therefore its opinions in the matter should have considerable weight, and if true means a great deal to the apple grower of this state."

Big Apples Cheaper in Grain. "One of the strong points of the man who has been extolling the merits of the fruit grown up in that country is its size. They have the moisture at their command and consequently have been able to produce the large, showy apples that have in the past been in great demand because when placed by the side of medium or small-sized fruit in the displays showed to better advantage. However, one thing must be remembered by the apple consumer, and that is that the larger the fruit the coarser the grain and correspondingly lower quality, and this is noticeably evident in fruit which has been forced beyond its natural growth. The apple which is forced has a large percentage of water in its makeup and therefore a less amount of real food product.

"For instance, compare the large apple of the northwest with the medium-sized Nebraska apple. You say that we grow large apples in Nebraska. That is the exception rather than the rule. The average size of apples typical of Nebraska orchards will run from 104 to 150 in the standard apple box and are two and one-fourth to three inches in diameter. The sizes that are in greatest demand run from 118 to 150 per box. These sizes more nearly meet the average demands of the consumer and are of a high quality, sound and generally well colored.

Nebraska Apples Superior. "There is no question but that the Nebraska apple is superior to any grown outside the central west when it comes to flavor. Anyone who eats a Nebraska Jonathan and then one grown in another section, and especially the Jonathan of the northwest, does not need to be an expert to distinguish the great difference in favor of the Nebraska apple. Then, too, we know by actual experience that Nebraska apples in storage will keep longer and stand up better when removed from storage than the western apple.

"The Nebraska grower has it in his power to control the market if he will put up his apples as attractively as the western grower. He must allow nothing but the best fruit to go on the market, packed in strict conformity to rigid standards and bear the brand of his orchard or association. By doing so Nebraska apples will soon be the standard by which apples from other sections are measured."
