Graff Disagrees

With Claxton on

All-Year School An all-year-round school, summer months being devoted to vocational work. as proposed by Philander P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education. does not meet the whole-hearted approval Superintendent Graff said: "It is a question in my mind whether we are ready for this or not. Shall the school take over the work of the home entirely? You would be surprised at the number of school children who work now out of school hours."

of Superintendent E. U. Graff.

The superintendent referred to the schools of Gary, Ind., where all-year and sixteen-hour day schools are in operation. He said the extra time was devoted to vocational pursuits and no more academic work was taught than in other schools.
